TAX GRAND JURY IMPANELING PUT OFF FOR LACK OF ENOUGH JURORS

Only 12 of Required 23 Available From Panel of 29 — Omaha Body Called Back Into Session Jan. 26.

Impaneling of the federal grand jury which is to inquire into tax scandals in the Truman Administration was postponed today when the required number of 23 jurors was not qualified from the panel of 29 who appeared.

United States District Judge George H. Moore, who was prepared to charge the jury if a sufficient number were qualified, announced from the bench: "This is the first instance of this nature I remember."

Meanwhile, it was announced today that a federal grand jury at Omaha, Nebr., which has started an investigation into tax scandals, has been unexpectedly called back into session for Jan. 26.

Had Heard Finnegan.

Before recessing last Friday, the Omaha jury had heard testimony from a number of important witnesses, including James P. Finnegan, former St. Louis collector of internal revenue, whose far-flung activities and political tie-ins when he was in office are under scrutiny.

Authorities would not comment on the reasons for recalling the Omaha jury, which was not expected to resume hearing of testimony in the tax scandal investigation for at least one month.

Judge Moore ordered 50 more prospective jurors to be instructed to appear in his court Monday at 10 a.m. for selection of 11 more jurors to augment the 12 chosen today. Of the 29 who appeared, 17 were excused for what Judge Moore described as "valid reasons."

Usually No Difficulty.

Usually the federal court has no difficulty finding a sufficient number of grand jurors from the panel of prospective members summoned.

On Dec. 20 Judge Moore instructed William P. Gruner, then jury commissioner, and James J. O'Connor, clerk of the United States District Court, to select 50 names from the grand jury wheel as prospective members of the grand jury called for today.

Twenty-one of these persons indicated in the questionnaires returned to the district court that they would be unable to serve for health or other reasons.

Judge Moore became irritated when two of the 29 who appeared in court said they stated on their original questionnaires they were hard of hearing. The judge said that the jury commissioner should not have had these two persons called as prospective jurors.

Other Matters Scheduled.

Before delving into tax irregularities arising from the period when Finnegan was collector of internal revenue here, the jury when it is impaneled is expected to consider other matters, including the efficiency of the St. Louis office.

Of immediate interest to government investigators is the fixing of responsibility for the original "whitewash" of Finnegan's activities when he was collector.

Finally, at Judge Moore's urging, a grand jury made a searching inquiry into the conduct of the St. Louis collector and returned an indictment. Finnegan, convicted of misconduct in office, is completing a two-year term in the federal prison at Terre Haute, Ind.

NEW INDICTMENT OF LATTIMORE IS DISMISSED

Judge Youngdahl Says Vague Charges Make Trial by a Jury Impossible.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS
A Washington Correspondent of The Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18—Judge Luther Youngdahl today dismissed the perjury indictment brought last October against Owen Lattimore on the ground that the two counts of the indictment were so vague as to make trial of the charges by a jury impossible.

This is the second time that Youngdahl has thrown out a perjury charge against the Far Eastern Expert. He had found an earlier indictment, also based on Lattimore's testimony in 1952 before the Senate Internal Security Committee, insubstantial and vague with a jury required to pass on Lattimore's writings over a period of many years. The United States Circuit Court of Appeals upheld Youngdahl's dismissal of the key counts in the earlier indictment.

"They demonstrate," Youngdahl said of the counts in the latest indictment, "that the Government seeks to establish that at some time, in some way, in some places, in all his vast writings over a 15-year period, Lattimore agreed with something it calls and personally defines as following the Communist line and promoting Communist interests."

Earlier Indictment.

The earlier indictment charged Lattimore with having denied under oath before the committee that he was a "sympathizer" with Communism. Youngdahl at several points in his 14-page memorandum quotes the Circuit Court of Appeals decision which found the word "sympathizer" to be "invalidly vague."

"Jury inquiries would be limitless," Youngdahl said in his memorandum. "No charge by the court could embody objective standards to circumscribe and guide the jury in its determination of what the witness might have meant regarding words he used. With so sweeping an incident with its many vague charges, and with the existing atmosphere of assumed and expected loathing for Communism, it would be neither surprising nor unreasonable were the jury subconsciously impelled to substitute its own understanding for that of the defendant."

This last gets down to one of the most abstruse points in the prolonged controversy over Lattimore's opinions.

It was Youngdahl's contention with respect to the first indictment, and he was upheld by the appeals court, that a jury would have to determine Lattimore's own definition of "Communist line" at the time he denied that he was a follower or promoter of it.

60 Days for Appeal.

United States District Attorney Leo Rover declined to comment on Youngdahl's decision. He has 60 days in which to take an appeal to the higher court.

When the second Lattimore

ALCOHOLIC MILK DEVELOPED BY BRITISH DAIRY

LONDON, Jan. 18 (UP)—Britain, which invented the steam engine and gave the world its first jet plane, today came up with alcoholic milk.

It comes in four flavors — whisky, brandy, rum and gin.

Government officials said they have granted the request of Mortlock's Modern Dairies for a license to spike its milk with alcohol and hibiscus flower honey.

The concoction will be sold under the trade name of Noggo and is offered at the equivalent of 35 cents for a four ounce bottle.

Mrs. Poppy Laidlaw, who runs Mortlock's, explained she hit upon the idea of alcoholic milk because:

"I hate cows and never drink milk."

Her son Bryan said the dairy is writing French Premier Mendes-France suggesting that the Noggo formula might help in his campaign to encourage Frenchmen to drink milk instead of wine.

12 PARKING TICKETS PILE UP; DRIVER'S FINE TOO, TO $96

Morris Shenberg, a peanut salesman of 6408 Cates avenue, University City, passed up the bargain of $12 for 12 parking meter violations by letting the tickets accumulate and paid a $96 fine today in Police Judge Robert G. Dowd's court.

Patrolman Hugh Roman, who rides a tri-car, said he noticed the tickets he had been putting on Shenberg's automobile between Dec. 1 and Dec. 29 had not been paid. So the next time he saw the car parked illegally on Eighth street between Market street and Washington avenue, he had it towed away.

When Shenberg went to claim his machine, he was arrested. He told the court he planned to keep the tickets and pay them all at once. Judge Dowd reminded him that had he paid them one at a time, the cost would have been $1 each instead of $5 and costs.

KOREAN FANATIC THREATENS TO SHOOT GEN. TAYLOR

SEOUL, (Wednesday) Jan. 19 (AP)—A Korean fanatic yesterday burst into a top secret military conference and threatened Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor with a pistol before being seized, a reliable source said today.

The informant said the incident occurred at Taegu, in southeast Korea, where the Far East commander was in consultation with Gen. Chung Il Kwon, chief of staff of the South Korean army.

The fanatic drew a pistol and pointed it at Taylor but before he could pull the trigger South Korean army guards disarmed him, the informant added. The Korean, who was in the uniform of a South Korean officer, is being questioned. It was not learned whether he actually was an officer or how he got inside the building, which is used by high ranking officers.

Insult to Injury.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 18 (AP)—Earl J. Green was sentenced to 30 days in jail yesterday after a hearing in police court. He was accused of taking coal from the yard of an elementary school and then taking the ashes back to dump on the school property.

A.W.O.L. SOLDIERS CAPTURED AFTER 100 M.P.H. CHASE

5 Shots Fired as 13 Police Cars Join in 8-Mile Pursuit of 3 Fugitives in County.

Three fugitive soldiers from an Army stockade were captured early today after an automobile chase at speeds of more than 100 miles an hour by policemen from eight St. Louis county municipalities.

Five shots were fired by officers as 13 police cars sped out Manchester road in pursuit of a stolen automobile occupied by the soldiers. The shots went wild.

The speedometer of the lead police car, driven by Patrolman George Machino of Brentwood, showed speed of 107 miles an hour as he closed in on the fleeing soldiers.

8-Mile Chase.

The chase, which began in Maplewood, ended at Des Peres, eight miles west, when the pursued car turned onto Des Peres road and stopped.

Two of the soldiers got out and surrendered immediately, but the driver, barefoot and wearing only a T-shirt and trousers, ran into a nearby wood. He was found 30 minutes later near a quarry.

The soldiers said they were Karl George Smith, 19 years old, the driver; Roy G. Spalding, 18, and William Harrison Blair, 18, all of Michigan.

They said they had broken out of a stockade Sunday night at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indianapolis, where they were held for being A.W.O.L.

After stealing an automobile in Indianapolis, they drove here.

Flee Maplewood Police.

Two Maplewood policemen became suspicious when they saw the three young men in the 1953 Buick sedan at Bellevue avenue and Manchester road at 2:25 a.m.

When the officers pulled up to question the occupants, the soldiers' car roared away, attempted to elude pursuit by circling around several Maplewood streets, then headed west on Manchester.

A radio call by the Maplewood policemen brought officers from Brentwood, Richmond Heights, Glendale, Kirkwood, Rock Hill, Webster Groves and Frontenac into the chase.

The soldiers explained they had their shoes off, resting their feet, when the pursuit began. Smith, the driver, had no opportunity to get his shoes back on.

While the chase was going on, sheriff's deputies and State Highway patrolmen set up a road block on Manchester west of Des Peres to halt the fleeing soldiers. The three youths are held for military authorities and the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

TIDAL WAVE SAID TO HAVE STRUCK VENEZUELAN PORT

4 Ships at Anchor Destroyed, Many Houses Believed to Have Been Flattened.

CARACAS, Jan. 18 (UP)—A tidal wave hit the port of La Vela on the Caribbean in northwest Venezuela, reports reaching here said today.

The reports said the wave, believed caused by a submarine earthquake, destroyed four small ships at anchor. Many houses along the waterfront of the town of 4000 population were said to have been flattened.

There was no mention of casualties.

TUNIS POLICE OFFICER SHOT

TUNIS, Jan. 18 (AP)—Police Inspector Emile Nullet was shot in the back of the head today as he was walking on Rue De Bone, 50 yards from the home of the French resident-general.

Passersby seized his attacker.

Woman Demands, and Gets, Kiss From Speaker of Missouri House

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 18—A woman insisted on her rights yesterday in the Missouri House and got them.

Mrs. I. E. Tulloch, wife of the Democratic Representative from Nodaway county, was here with her husband to celebrate their forty-ninth wedding anniversary.

Following adoption of a congratulatory resolution by House members, Speaker Roy Hamlin was about to pass on to other business when Mrs. Tulloch interrupted him.

"Mr. Speaker," she said, "I think it's a shame you didn't ask to kiss the bride."

"Get right up here and I'll correct the record," Hamlin retorted, grinning.

The silver-haired Mrs. Tulloch climbed the steps to the Speaker's dais and Hamlin enthusiastically kissed her as the House applauded.

NINE SENATORS DISAGREE WITH KNOWLAND ON PEIPING MISSION

Majority of Foreign Relations Group Hopes Hammarskjold Trip May Lead to Release of Airmen.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 (AP)—A majority of Senate Foreign Relations committee members indicated today they are hopeful of Dag Hammarskjold's mission to Red China may lead ultimately to freedom for 11 United States airmen imprisoned as "spies."

None of nine Democratic and Republican Senators interviewed agreed with Senator Knowland (Rep.), of California, the minority leader and a committee member who said yesterday that the United Nations Secretary General's trip was a "failure by any fair standard or yardstick."

Senator Humphrey (Dem.), of Minnesota, said that if Knowland has any private information about the mission "his first duty is to inform the Secretary of State and the Foreign Relations Committee."

Stands With President.

Senator Morse (Ind.), of Oregon, a new member of the committee, said:

"I am pleased to stand with President Eisenhower and follow his advice on the Hammarskjold mission, rather than follow Bill Knowland."

Mr. Eisenhower has cautioned against "impetuous words or deeds" which he said might "endanger the lives" of the captive airmen.

Knowland asked today whether he saw a conflict after he and other Republican congressional leaders met with the President for their regular Tuesday morning discussion of the legislative program, replied:

"I do not." But he added, "We may look at the situation from a slightly different viewpoint."

Senator George (Dem.), of Georgia, committee chairman, said "this whole problem is one that calls for moderation and great patience."

Senator Capehart (Rep.), Indiana, said he was "terribly discouraged," but added, "I don't have enough facts to talk about whether the mission was a failure or not."

Too Early to Criticize.

Senator Hickenlooper (Rep.), Iowa, said it was too early to "criticize the mission."

In a speech at Chicago yesterday Knowland said "no service is done the American people . . . by pretending" that the mission was a success.

Senator Smith (Rep.) of New Jersey, senior Republican on the Far East subcomittee, said he has discussed the prisoner question with Secretary of State Dulles and that he saw "hopeful prospects" for the release of the airmen. This country "cannot proceed unilaterally," Smith said, but must make its major effort within the U.N.

Senator Aiken (Rep.), of Vermont, told a reporter "it is far too early" to call the Hammarskjold mission a failure. Senator Green (Dem.) of Rhode Island, expressed a similar view.

HOUSE LEADER DENIES SENATE IS UPPER BRANCH

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 (UP) House Democratic leader John W. McCormack requested Senators yesterday to stop referring to themselves as the "upper branch" of Congress.

The House the Massachusetts Congressman told his colleagues, is equal to the Senate in elevation, in ability and under the Constitution.

McCormack noted that newspapers have for years referred to the Senate as the "upper chamber." Although wounded in the pride, he said, House members generally have borne the slight in silence.

Recently, he said, a Senator himself—"a distinguished member of the other body"—made such a reference. This gentleman, he said, "should be corrected."

"He should study the Constitution," McCormack added. "The two bodies are co-equal."

He said the "upper branch" tag placed on the Senate originated in the early days of the Republic when Congress met in Philadelphia. In those days, he said, the Senate met in a room a floor above the House chamber.

EMPTY BUS RUNS WILD

An unoccupied bus of the Vandalia Bus Co., its brakes apparently loosened, coasted down a ramp at the Trailways bus depot, 708 North Broadway, and across Broadway into the side of the Union Market building today.

Two plate glass windows of the Greyhound bus terminal were shattered, bricks below the window were knocked loose and a metal awning and the front of the bus damaged. There was heavy vehicular and pedestrian traffic on Broadway at the time, but the path of the runaway bus somehow remained clear.

FOUR CONVICTS SEIZE 5 GUARDS AND DEMAND CAR

Rebelling Inmates at Massachusetts State Prison Have Pistols, Says Warden.

BOSTON, Jan. 18 (AP)—Four inmates with long criminal records early today seized five Massachusetts State Prison guards at pistol point and demanded an automobile in which to flee the 150-year-old institution.

Seven hours later state police carried machine guns and several heavy boxes labeled "gas equipment" into the prison.

The uprising started at about 5 a.m. At about noon the four convicts released from the solitary confinement section 10 other convicts who refused to participate in the planned breakout.

Twenty-two prisoners were supposed to be in the cellblock —the Cherry Hill section of the prison—when the trouble started. Whether the eight still presumed to be with the four known participants took part in the uprising was not known immediately. The 10 prisoners released were locked up in other sections of the prison.

The four leaders of the plot rebuffed pleas of the Rev. Edward Hartigan, Catholic chaplain, to give up. However, they did allow the priest into the block to hear confessions of four of the guards who are Catholics.

When they demanded a car, the four sent word they would take the guards with them and release them unharmed after they were "in the clear."

Officials rejected this, explaining "we're making no deals."

Deputy Warden Perely S. Vance answered, "I won't comment," when asked directly if the desperate prisoners made any threats against the guard-hostages in bargaining for liberty. Later, however, Vance told reporters he talked by telephone with the convicts. He said the telephone was answered by Walter H. Balbin, one of the prisoners, and that he talked to Guard Warren L. Harrington who said they were "ok."

Convicts Named.

Theodore (Teddy) Green, bank robber and escape artist, was described as ringleader of the four. Vance said Green and Balbin both had pistols. Balbin and Green were participants in a mass escape attempt Nov. 7, 1953.

The other two rebels, Vance said, were Fritz Swenson, who was involved in a riot at the prison in July of 1952, and Joseph Flaherty, who once was named Boston's Public Enemy No. 1.

Prison officials identified the

DENIES SIGNING JOINT TAX FORM WITH EX-HUSBAND

Mrs. Carl Helfrich Testifies in $189,364 U.S. Suit Against Missing Coal Dealer.

Mrs. Alma Helfrich, the former wife of Carl Helfrich, East St. Louis coal dealer who went to Mexico before he was charged with income tax evasion in 1952, testified today she did not sign a joint income tax return with Helfrich on which the Government is seeking an additional $189,364 in taxes, interest and penalties.

When she appeared for a hearing before a United States tax court in the Federal Building here, she was served with a subpoena to appear Thursday before a grand jury in Danville, Ill. The jury reportedly is seeking information on Helfrich's whereabouts.

The former Mrs. Helfrich testified today she did not sign, nor authorize her signature, on a joint tax return filed for both of them by Helfrich for the year 1947. They were divorced in 1951.

The Government is seeking an additional tax of $118,353 from Helfrich and his former wife on allegedly unreported income for 1947, plus interest of $11,835 and penalties of $59,176.

The attractive 30-year-old divorcee, who is contesting the claim although Helfrich is not, said she also was living in Mexico at present.

In seeking to establish her liability, the Government introduced evidence intended to show she and her former husband had owned an apartment building at 9 Topton way, Clayton, and that she withdrew funds for personal and business purposes from a joint checking account in which rents from the apartment were deposited.

A 13-count indictmeant charging Helfrich with evasion of $494,388 in income taxes for the years 1946 through 1949 was returned by a federal grand jury at Danville in 1952.

In one count it was alleged he fled from Missouri Aug. 23, 1951, to avoid prosecution after Internal Revenue Bureau agents began checking his accounts.

The agents said he cashed securities and checks totaling $78,107, sold his personal belongings and vacated his apartment at 8301 Delmar boulevard, University City, several days before tax liens were filed against him.

Halfrich, former partner in the old Hyde Park gambling casino at Venice, had three coal firms and one hauling company, all with an office in East St. Louis. He is reported living in Mexico City and Acapulco.

TINY OUTPOST ON YIKIANGSHAN CAPTURED AFTER BIG AIR STRIKE

Peiping Radio Claims 'Liberation' of Garrison — Dulles Discounts Military Importance of Loss.

TAIPEH, Formosa, Jan. 18 (AP) — A Chinese Communist seaborne force stormed tiny Yikiangshan today behind a furious bombing and artillery barrage and presumably conquered the island, bringing the vital Tachens eight miles to the south within gun range.

(In Washington, the Pentagon said it had received reports confirming the capture of Yikiangshan by the Communists. The Peiping radio, heard in Tokyo, earlier boasted that Communist forces landed on the island at 2:30 p.m. and "liberated" it two hours later).

Reliable reports in the Nationalist capital said radio contact with the island was broken at 6 p.m. and it was presumed the Reds had completed their conquest.

An earlier defense ministry communique had prepared the public for the island's fall by announcing that Yikiangshan, a stepping stone to the Tachens, was garrisoned "by a few brave guerrillas" who late today "were still resisting bravely."

Tachen Invasion Feared.

Unofficial quarters said they feared a full-scale invasion of the Tachens might follow. These islands are about 200 miles north of Formosa.

President Chiang Kai-shek called a conference of top level military leaders at Nationalist headquarters here tonight.

It was reliably reported that the Reds shelled the Tachens this afternoon but made no attempt to land there.

The Tachens and Yikiangshan were worked over by 60 Red war planes which dropped 200 bombs in 22 minutes. Communist artillery on nearby Toumen island bombarded Yikiangshan heavily.

Then, said the ministry, 100 motorized junks and other landing craft moved in to attack. They were covered by two destroyers, four other types of warships, five torpedo boats and more than 20 gunboats.

The ministry claimed Nationalist gunners on Yikiangshan sank one Red gunboat and heavily damaged another. Six motorized junks also were reported sunk before the Communists planted a beachhead on Yikiangshan.

A communique also said one Russian-made twin-engine bomber and one fighter-bomber were shot down.

The defense ministry said the defenders of the island inflicted heavy casualties.

Anxious watchers on the Tachens saw huge fires blaze up on Yikiangshan.

U.S. Fleet on Patrol.

The United States Seventh Fleet patrols the waters of the Formosa strait, but there was no indication what steps—if any—the United States might take. The United States is committed to the defense of Formosa and the nearby Pescadores, but has never said what it would do if any of the Nationalist offshore islands were invaded.

Yikiangshan is eight miles north of the Tachens and five miles south of Red-held Toumen island. From Yikiangshan the Reds could hammer the Tachens with 155 mm guns, just as they have bombarded Yikiangshan from Toumen.

(Secretary of State John Foster Dulles told a news conference Yikiangshan was without any particular importance. He also declared the Tachen islands are not in any sense essential to the defense of Formosa although one of them holds a radar outpost and may be militarily useful.)

There are reported to be about 20,000 Nationalist troops and guerrillas on the Tachens, an important link in Chiang's chain of offshore islands.

Repeatedly Shelled.

Tiny Yikiangshan has been subjected to repeated bombardments since Nov. 1 when the Reds reportedly fired more than 3000 shells at it from Toumen.

Its capture is both politically and militarily important for it gives the Communists a victory to tie in with their oft-repeated threats to liberate Formosa.

Yikiangshan is the first of Chiang's outposts to fall since the Reds opened the civil war Sept. 3 with a 6000-round bombardment of Quemoy.

Mayor of New York, Named Best Dressed, Credits His Wife

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18—Mayor Robert F. Wagner was named yesterday as the best-dressed man in public life by the International Association of Clothing Designers but he insisted the credit, if any, should go to his wife, Susan.

The Mayor explained that he wouldn't dare buy a suit without her aid, "because I'm a little color blind."

For the same reason, he said, Mrs. Wagner selects a tie for him every morning. Yesterday the Mayor wore an oxford gray flannel suit, a single-breasted three-button model. His tie didn't clash.

DEMOCRATS OPEN BROAD FIGHT ON BUDGET; SOME IN G.O.P. JOIN THEM

Expanded Foreign Aid Program Meets Resistance in Both Parties—TVA Fund Cut Stirs Opposition.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 (UP) —Democrats attacked President Eisenhower's budget from both flanks today—for its failure to get the Treasury out of the red and for some of the economies recommended.

Democrats and Republicans who were still hoping to balance the budget were pointing to an expanded foreign aid program as the top priority target for congressional budget cuts.

The Democratic National Committee distributed to Congressmen in that party a "confidential" memorandum which suggested that the budget failed to carry out 1952 Republican campaign pledges and that the President had reversed his field on a number of recommendations he made to Congress yesterday.

$62,400,000,000 Budget.

Mr. Eisenhower's budget message for the 1956 fiscal year starting next July 1 estimated federal spending in that year at $62,400,000,000 and the deficit at $2,400,000,000.

Congressional reaction was marked by:

1. Some leaders expressed guarded hope that Congress, or Congress and the Administration together, could achieve further cuts to balance the budget.

2. The foreign aid program, perennial target of the economy bloc, was singled out for most criticism because both the $4,700,000,000 spending estimate and the request for new spending authority were increased from the current year.

3. Although Mr. Eisenhower's budgets have shown steady reductions in spending, Democrats made it plain that they are going to keep pointing to 1952 Republican campaign promise of a balanced budget.

4. Many Democrats cheered the increased Air Force budget but questioned the wisdom of proposed Army cuts.

Senator Harry F. Byrd (Dem.), Virginia, noted that a 4 per cent cut in spending would balance Mr. Eisenhower's budget. He said a reduction of that amount "undoubtedly" could be achieved if Congress and the Administration have the will to do it.

Against Rise in Debt Limit.

Byrd, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, also declared his opposition to any permanent increase in the national debt limit, which reverts to $275,000,000,000 next July 1. He expressed hope that there would be no need for even a temporary increase, such as Congress voted for the current fiscal year. Mr. Eisenhower said an increase would be necessary.

Byrd was one of many who criticized the foreign aid program. He said he thinks foreign economic aid, for which a billion was earmarked by Mr. Eisenhower, should be stopped completely.

Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, chairman of the Senate Republican policy committee, also pointed to foreign aid as one area where congressional cuts might lead to a balanced budget.

Senator John L. McClellan (Dem.), Arkansas, said halving the foreign aid budget would erase the deficit.

Chairman Walter F. George (Dem.), Georgia, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said he was disappointed by the size of the foreign aid program but would not comment further until he knew the details.

The Democratic National Committee analysis placed quotations from Mr. Eisenhower's 1952 campaign speeches alongside a number of budget points dealing with the deficit, spending estimates and the request for an increase in the debt limit.

Eisenhower and Tax Cuts.

Of the President's opposition to tax reduction this year and his hope for cuts next year, the memo said:

"Ike is opposing tax cuts in 1955 because of a prospective $2,400,000,000 deficit, although he had no objections to tax cuts in 1954, an election year, despite a much larger deficit . . ."

The memorandum professed to find contradictions between the budget message and recommendations made by Mr. Eisenhower in other messages. These involved crippled children and maternal and child health, military manpower, foreign aid, loans for small farmers, agricultural conservation payments and power projects.

Referring to the Army cuts, the memo noted that Mr. Eisenhower's State of the Union message warned that "undue reliance on one weapon or preparation for one kind of warfare simply invites an enemy to resort to another."

Of the increase in foreign aid spending, it quoted from Mr. Eisenhower's foreign trade message which said the Administration wanted to curtail aid and to expand trade.

Fight on Dixon-Yates Deal.

Opponents of the proposed Dixon-Yates power plant expressed confidence today that Congress would refuse to appropriate $6,500,000 this year for the Tennessee Valley Authority to build a transmission line to the plant.

A TVA block of Democratic Senators considered Mr. Eisenhower's request for such an appropriation as a "fair target" in their fight against the proposed steam power plant at West Memphis, Ark.

But Senator Clinton P. Anderson (Dem.), New Mexico, a leading opponent of the private plant project, said the assault on the appropriation request for the transmission line would be only a skirmish in the main battle.

If opponents fail to block construction of the plant, Anderson said, he would favor appropriating money eventually for the connecting transmission line. It will not be needed for two or three years even if the plant is built, he said.

Anderson is incoming chairman of the House-Senate atomic committee.

Senator Estes Kefauver (Dem.), Tennessee, said he would vote against the TVA budget request. Senator Albert Gore (Dem.), Tennessee, said Mr. Eisenhower "has come face-to-face with the power of Congress to control the purse strings" in the fight over the so-called Dixon-Yates project.

Public power advocates joined in attacking President Eisenhower's over-all budget recommendations for TVA, which come to less than a fourth of what was appropriated for TVA for the current year.

Senator John Sparkman (Dem.), Alabama, said they were further proof that the Eisenhower Administration "is out to destroy TVA." Senator Wayne Morse (Ind.), Oregon, said he later "will comment in detail on the budget proposals to scuttle TVA."

Senator Richard L. Neuberger (Dem.), Oregon, said the TVA recommendations were part of the pattern of President Eisenhower's budget aimed at death of the Government's public power program.

Cannon Against Supercarrier.

Meanwhile, Chairman Clarence Cannon (Dem.), Missouri, of the House Appropriations Committee, proposed that the supercarrier be eliminated from the Administration's defense budget. He said it was an outmoded weapon.

Cannon criticized the Administration's request for a fifth supercarrier a Democrats in general assumed a "show-me" attitude toward the Administration's $34,000,000,000 military budget for the coming fiscal year.

Democrats, who two years ago fought a $5,000,000,000 cut in the Air Force budget, generally applauded the high priority placed on atomic might and air power. But they questioned the wisdom of the sharp cutbacks in ground strength proposed by the Administration.

Democrats were not alone in questioning the manpower cutback, which will reduce over-all military strength from the present 3,200,000 to 2,850,000 by mid-1956. Several influential Republicans said they felt the Administration still had not made a case for the cutback.

Cannon's proposal to cut out the $180,000,000 requested for construction of a fifth supercarrier gave a foretaste of the impending congressional battle over the budget. The U.S.S. Forrestal, first of the 60,000-ton carriers, was launched last month, two others are under construction and a fourth has been authorized.

Says All Will Be Sunk.

Cannon said that he did "not approve of expenditures of enormous sums on aircraft carriers when authorities say that no one carrier will be afloat for more than 10 hours after war is declared."

"We are also told that war will be decided in the first 15 to 30 days," he said. "A carrier in that time could not get in a position to bomb Moscow."

Cannon said he thinks "we should concentrate more of our spending on land-based aircraft."

Cannon did not identify the "authorities" who claim the supercarrier is defenseless against air attack. But the comment was similar to Air Force views on the value of the huge ships. The Navy, conscious of the Air Force criticism, has stressed in turn that the carriers are highly mobile and can be defended against planes.

Atomic Craft Makes Spray Fly

Spray flies as the Nautilus, world's first atomic submarine, moves toward Long Island Sound to start trial runs under nuclear propulsion.

ATOM SUBMARINE STILL AT SEA ON FIRST TRIAL TRIP

GROTON, Conn., Jan. 18 (AP) —The submarine Nautilus, first of a proposed fleet of seven atomic powered undersea craft, remained at sea on its history-making builder's trials.

A spokesman said these trials were to last a full 36 hours, and that the Nautilus was not expected to return to its berth at the electric boat division of General Dynamics Corp., here until "very late tonight."

In man's first successful effort to tame the atom to provide transportation, the submarine eased smoothly from its dock here late yesterday morning under clear skies.

With an absence of fanfare, her skipper, Comdr. Eugene P. Wilkinson, San Diego, Calif., flashed a short message confirming his craft was under way on nuclear power, and moved the submarine into the trial area of the Long Island sound at a 12-knot speed.

REWARDS AGAIN PROPOSED FOR ATOM SMUGGLING TIPS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 (AP) — Attorney General Brownell asked Congress today to provide rewards of up to $500,000 for tips on the smuggling of atomic weapons and materials into this country.

In cases where an alien abroad gives such information, he suggested special consideration be given to admitting the alien and his family to this country for permanent residence.

Brownell originally proposed the rewards last summer shortly after FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover warned law enforcement officers throughout the country to be alert to detect small atomic weapons which might be concealed on the person or in small luggage. The reward bill passed the House but never reached the floor for action in the Senate.

PERU SAYS IT HAS CRUSHED PLOT TO OUST PRESIDENT

LIMA, Jan. 18 (AP)—The Government of Peru announced last night it has crushed a plot to overthrow President Manuel A. Odria. It said the intrigue was directed from Argentina by Gen. Zenon Noriega, former premier and war minister exiled after an unsuccessful coup last August.

Lt. Col. Jose Matallana, Valentin Gazzani and Wilfred Pflucker are under arrest. Matallana and Gazazni were seized last Friday when they sought to enter the country in disguise.

Noriega resigned as war minister last August after the Government accused him of leading a brief armed revolt. He was deported to San Francisco, Calif., where he stayed a few weeks before going to Argentina.

The communique said among others implicated in the plot were Carlos Miro Quesada and his brother, Enrique, part owners of Lima's morning newspaper El Comercio.

HEATH IS SELECTED TO BE AMBASSADOR TO LEBANON

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 (UP) —President Eisenhower today nominated Donald R. Heath, a career foreign service officer, to be United States Ambassador to the middle east republic of Lebanon.

Heath joined the State Department in 1921. His latest assignment has been Ambassador to Viet Nam.

HAMMARSKJOLD TO SEE DULLES ON TRIP FOR AIRMEN

Meets Secretary Tomorrow — U.S. Official Rejects Knowland's View on Mission.

By GEORGE H. HALL
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18—Secretary of State John Foster Dulles will confer in Washington tomorrow with United Nations Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold to obtain a first-hand account of Hammarskjold's mission to Communist China to seek release of imprisoned American airmen.

Announcing this at his press conference today, Dulles said it would be premature to characterize the apparent outcome of Hammarskjold's U.N. assignment as either a success or a failure.

In this comment the Secretary rejected the opinion of Senator William F. Knowland of California, Republican Minority Leader, that Hammarskjold had failed "by any standards or yardstick that Americans can use."

Accompanied by Lodge.

Dulles said that Hammarskjold would be accompanied to Washington by Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., United States Ambassador to the United Nations. Asked whether Lodge had not said he deemed Hammarskjold's journey successful, Dulles replied he doubted whether Lodge would consider the negotiations successful until the 15 military prisoners actually were returned to their homes.

Dulles was asked about today's news reports from Formosa disclosing a Red Chinese attack on the tiny island of Yikiangshan, about 200 miles north of Formosa and about eight miles north of the two Tachen islands, which are held by the Nationalist Chinese.

Dulles said Yikiangshan was not garrisoned by regular troops of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and was not essential to the defense of Formosa or the nearby Pescadores, covered by the proposed mutual defense treaty between the United States and Nationalist China.

Yikiangshan, Dulles said, is one of a group of islands four or five of which were taken by the Communists last May. He said no one paid an; attention to that incident, but that since May the public had become better informed about happenings along the China coast.

Dulles said the Tachens are not essential to Formosa defense, although they might be useful militarily. He said one of them had a radar installation but he did not know how effective it might be as a warning device.

Declines to Speculate.

Dulles did not speculate on the timing of the Chinese Communists' latest show of belligerency. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee will begin hearings tomorrow on the Southeast Asia Collective Defense Treaty and probably next week will open hearings on the Formosa treaty.

The Secretary said the United States would have no objection if the United Nations undertook to arrange a cease-fire in the Formosa strait, between Formosa and the mainland, but that this country would have to obtain the concurrence of the Nationalists before agreeing to this procedure.

Asked whether he thought the Chinese Communists were using the issue of the American airmen as a means of obtaining entrance into the U.N., Dulles replied he did not think the Chinese Communists would be so stupid. Their actions would create a further impediment to U.N. entrance, he said.

Dulles repeated that at this stage the United States is relying on efforts by the U.N. because the service men were serving under the U.N. when they were captured and it is up to the U.N. to effect their release. If the U.N. fails, Dulles said, the United States will take up the cause.

PRESIDENT SAID TO WANT STANDBY CONTROL POWERS

Plan Would Permit Him to Impose 90-Day Economic Freeze in Event of Enemy Attack.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 (AP) —President Eisenhower is reported to be planning to ask Congress to give him stand-by authority to impose price, wage, rent and other wartime controls immediately in event of enemy attack.

Reversing past policy, the President also is expected to seek stand-by powers to curb consumer credit and to requisition private property.

The requests will go to Congress in several weeks, informed officials said yesterday, as part of the Administration's program for a two-year extension of the Defense Production Act which expires June 30.

The cabinet approved the plan in principle last Friday, it was reported. A majority of the Cabinet officers are understood to be in favor of making the stand-by authority permanent—at least for the duration of the cold war.

90-Day Freeze.

The proposed law would permit the President, if the nation were suddenly attacked, to clamp a freeze on the economy which would last for 90 days or until Congress replaced it with a new stabilization act. This would give Congress time to write detailed war powers legislation.

When Mr. Eisenhower took office in 1953 Senator Capehart (Rep.), Indiana, introduced a stand-by control bill. The Administration declined to indorse the proposal, however, saying it was confident Congress could act quickly in an emergency. Capehart's bill was approved by the Senate but failed in the House.

The Administration took the same stand a year ago, but some officials are known to have felt rising concern over the possibility that an atomic or hydrogen bomb attack on Washington might make it impossible to convene Congress quickly.

Recently, it is understood, the Administration completed an appraisal of the President's "inherent" or "implied" powers to invoke extraordinary controls in an emergency.

It was decided—partly on the basis of the 1952 Supreme Court decision voiding President Truman's seizure of the strike-bound steel industry—that the President should not rely on his "implied" powers.

The only alternative, the cabinet officers agreed, was to seek from Congress the necessary legal authority in advance.

The request probably cannot reach Capitol Hill for several weeks, informants said, because of the necessity for clearing the proposal with the numerous affected agencies and checking it from all legal viewpoints.

Limitation Suggested.

Some White House advisers are known to favor a law which would permit the freeze action only in case of an attack on the continental United States, its territories or possessions, or its troops abroad.

This limitation, it was felt, might meet the objections of those Congress members who might balk at letting the White House decide for itself when a national emergency occurred.

The Office of Defense Mobilization recently took steps to strengthen its preparations for stabilization action in event of full mobilization. Edward Phelps, who was deputy director of the Office of Price Stabilization in the Korean war and a price control official in World War II, has been installed as assistant ODM director in charge of the agency's stabilization division.

In seeking extension of the Defense Production Act the Administration is expected to ask for continuance of its present priority and allocation powers and its authority to strengthen the industrial base for mobilization loans, long term purchase contracts, and other devices.

REBELS' LEADER REPORTED KILLED IN COSTA RICA

Government Says 34 Followers Died With Teodoro Picado Jr., 60 Were Wounded.

SAN JOSE, Jan. 18 (AP)—Costa Rica's general staff declared today rebel commander Teodoro Picado Jr. has been killed on the Santa Rosa front, along with 34 of his men, and that it has "full confirmation" of his death. Picado, 27-year-old son of a former Costa Rican president, was graduated from the United States Military Academy at West Point in 1951.

The general staff also reported 60 wounded in the action around Santa Rosa, about 20 miles from the Nicaraguan frontier, against government losses of four men killed and 18 wounded.

The announcement came about the time the rebels' radio was broadcasting a manifesto in Picado's name protesting the shipment of arms and planes from abroad to the Costa Rican government as a violation of international law. It said "This action of the Inter-American Organization of States is criminal." The radio denied yesterday a rumor in San Jose that Picado had been killed.

(A rebel broadcast heard at Managua, Nicaragua, said 200 men have landed near Puerto Limon, on the Caribbean side of Costa Rica 70 miles east of San Jose. The broadcast added that 300 men have reinforced rebel units on the northwestern front and forecast a rebel victory in a second "battle of Santa Rosa.)

The Santa Rosa area appeared quiet today. The general staff lacked reports of any action beyond patroling. The lull followed the arrival yesterday of four United States fighter planes in San Jose to bolster President Jose Figueres's forces.

Two of the three planes reported used by the insurgents promptly flew to Nicaragua and were seized by the Nicaraguan government.

The rebel radio today claimed that former Costa Rican President Angel Calderon Guardia, "supreme commander" of the rebel forces, "is now at the gates of Liberia," which is on the inter-American highway, about 20 miles south of Santa Rosa and 138 miles northwest of San Jose.

The rebel radio said Calderon Guardia took charge Sunday after reaching rebel headquarters "from outside" Costa Rica. He served as president from 1940 to 1944 and was exiled following the successful revolution led by Figueres in 1948.

$2,000,000 CITY CHILD CENTER URGED BY BOARD OF GUARDIANS

Report Recommends Group of Buildings Centrally Located to Bring Activities Together.

The Board of Children's Guardians has recommended construction of a $2,000,000 Children's Center, containing separate buildings in a central location, for the care and treatment of children.

Circuit Judge David A. McMullan, board chairman, who made the report public yesterday, stressed the necessity of more centralized operation of the board's work.

The recommendation for a center was made to Mayor Raymond R. Tucker with the request that the project be included in the city's proposed $100,000,000 improvement bond issue.

Buildings Widely Separated.

The report, noting that the history of child care in St. Louis has been one of decentralization, called attention to the facts that Meramec Hills, home for girls, is 22 miles southwest of St. Louis, and Missouri Hills (Bellefontaine Farms), correctional institution for boys, is 17 miles north of the city. Meanwhile, the placing-out service offices are in the Civil Courts Building, Twelfth boulevard and Market street.

Decentralization, the report said, is now "recognized by the board as a weakness" in the present system.

"For better co-ordination of facilities, for efficiency and economy of operation and for public understanding of our problems, a single center for these three divisions is recommended," the report said.

One of the buildings would be for staff use and administrative offices; another would be a diagnostic clinic; there would be cottages for girls and different ones for boys, to replace Missouri and Meramec Hills; another building would be a school building and still another a gymnasium.

No Site Proposed.

The report did not propose a site for the center.

Drawbacks of the present decentralized system of operation were listed as time spent in traveling from one to the other and the inability to obtain adequate help because of the inconvenient locations of the two homes.

The report also recommended the work of the board remain a separate municipal function and not be integrated with the Juvenile Court, or the antiquated Children's Building at 1321 Clark avenue.

A committee of three circuit judges—Michael J. Scott, David A. McMullan and David J. Murphy—was named yesterday by Presiding Circuit Judge Waldo C. Mayfield to see that a proposed new $1,375,000 Children's Building project be placed before the screening committee for the $100,000,000 improvement bond issue.

Recommended by Judges.

The new and modern building, to replace the present one, which is old and inadequate, was recommended to Mayor Tucker by 17 of the 18 circuit judges.

Judge Scott said the present site, between the city jail and morgue, is not conducive to rehabilitating juvenile offenders. A suggestion that the new building be erected at the old Mounted Police Station in Forest Park has been made.

"The children really need a break," Judge Scott said, "and this is our opportunity to give them one. We can do something about juvenile delinquency by building a modern Children's Building, which would rehabilitate youthful offenders rather than encourage them to become hardened criminals."

3 COLLINSVILLE MEN SEIZED IN AUTO THEFT RING

11 Stolen Cars Recovered—Police Raid Garage, Find Machine Being Cut.

(Picture in Everyday Magazine.)

Investigation of an automobile theft ring centering at Collinsville which Ilinois state police said may have been operating on a nation-wide basis was continued today.

Three Collinsville men have been arrested and charged with possession of stolen automobiles and at least 11 stolen machines recovered, police said. Nine of them had been sold to innocent persons, usually after motor numbers were changed or other alterations made, it was stated.

Those arrested were Elmer Adams, a salesman, living in the 800 block of Bond street, Collinsville; Kelso B. Weaver, carpenter, 1000 block of St. Clair avenue, Collinsville, and Jerome Ashman, mechanic, 100 block of East Main street, Collinsville.

Warrants were issued by Justice of the Peace Charles C. Wright at Swansea, near Belleville. Adams, charged also with junking an automobile without a permit, was released on $5000 bond, Ashman on $2500 bond and Weaver on $2000 bond.

Police said Ashman was arrested Saturday after state and Collinsville officers, with a search warrant, raided the West End Garage, operated by Ashman at 100 Highland place on the edge of Collinsville, and found a late-model stolen Ford, with the motor missing, being cut in two with an acetylene torch.

Later Adams was arrested, police reported, after they found in his garage a stolen automobile, the number of which had been changed.

The officers said they found a total of nine stolen automobiles, some brought to this area from Chicago, had been sold by Adams to St. Clair and Madison county residents. Weaver was described as "working for Adams."

Practice of the ring, police said, was to buy a wrecked automobile as junk, obtaining the title, then using the title in sale of a stolen car of the same model as the wrecked one.

Sometimes the engine of a wrecked machine, if serviceable, would be switched to the stolen car; other times motor numbers would be altered to conform to numbers on titles. In other cases, machines would be sold without any alterations, police said.

PARAKEET 'ADOPTS' 7-YEAR-OLD GIRL, GETS RUN OF HOUSE

Speedy, a 10-month-old talking parakeet who prefers his morning eggs scrambled, is the almost constant companion of Judy Beckwith, 7-year-old daughter of Mrs. Imogene Beckwith, 5227 Robert avenue.

Although Speedy has not ventured to school with Judy, he eats breakfast and dinner from her plate, sits near her when she bathes and even sleeps perched on a lamp in her bedroom. One of his most frequent tricks is saying a few words on the telephone with friends of the family.

Speedy, who has the run of the house and whose favorite habitat is the family kitchen, boasts a 30-word vocabulary consisting mostly of flattering phrases about himself like "Speedy's a pretty bird." He has no mate, but has formed what may be a lasting attachment for a plastic parakeet which the family bought him for Christmas.

FORMER POLICEMAN SHOT IN QUARREL WITH WIFE DIES

Robert William Burke, a policeman 17 years until he resigned a little more than a year ago, died at Incarnate Word Hospital today of a wound of the abdomen, suffered Jan. 7 when he was shot by his wife, Leora, in their tavern at 1601 South Second street. Burke was 41 years old, his wife 32.

Police quoted her as admitting she fired three shots with a .32 caliber revolver after a quarrel which began when he accused her of drinking too much while on duty and she replied that he didn't help her enough.

The Burke residence is at 1921A South Compton avenue.

16 RIGHT HAND DRIVE POSTAL TRUCKS FOR AREA

Sixteen new right-hand drive trucks, which will enable the driver to deliver mail without leaving the vehicle, will be put into service in outlying areas of St. Louis and St. Louis county soon, Postmaster Bernard F. Dickmann said today.

Other features of the trucks include automatic transmissions, glass panels in the truck body, enabling the driver to see in all directions and a brake which releases automatically when pressure is applied to the accelerator.

The trucks will be used on an experimental basis at first, Dickmann said. They will replace trucks that have been in service six years or more, he said.

The vehicles will be used for mail delivery in residential areas where mailboxes are placed on posts at the curb.

CLAYTON HOMES INSPECTED FOR ILLEGAL STORM DRAINS

A house-to-house inspection is in progress in Clayton in an effort to enforce an ordinance which prohibits the connection of storm water drains to the sanitary sewer system, causing an overload during heavy rains.

The ordinance has been on the books, but was not previously enforced, Jerome M. Steiner, associate city attorney, said today. It carries a maximum penalty of $100 for each day of non-compliance after a specified time of warning.

The connections were made prior to the construction of relief sewers in the 1948 to 1950 period. When this system was installed all homeowners were asked to change connections. All homes built in the past five years were required to provide proper connections as a condition of receiving building permits.

GIRL, 5, RECOVERING; WATCH REMOVED FROM STOMACH

Mary Jeanne Jones, 5-year-old daughter of Mrs. Mary Ann Jones, 3628 Russell boulevard, was recovering successfully today from an operation a Missouri Pacific Hospital Sunday where doctors removed a wristwatch from her stomach.

She was rushed to the hospital after she casually remarked to her 6-year-old sister, Kathleen Ann, "Oh, I swallowed a watch." She gulped down the watch, Mary Jeanne later told her mother, because her grandmother, Mrs. Pearl Harkee, who lives with the family, had bathed her and sent her to bed.

The watch, about an inch long, a half-inch wide and a quarterinc hthick, was removed from her stomach in an hour-long operation.

BI-STATE AGENCY BILL TO JIBE WITH ILLINOIS'S FILED

Kinney Introduces Measure to Clarify Group's Authority to Sell Bonds.

By HERBERT A. TRASK
State Political Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 18—A bill to bring Missouri law governing the Bi-State Development Agency into conformity with Illinois legislation passed two years ago was introduced by Senator Michael Kinney (Dem.), of St. Louis, today.

A major objective of the measure is to clarify provisions respecting the agency's authority to sell revenue bonds to finance its projects.

Although approved by Illinois, the law by its own terms could not be effective until a like measure was adopted by the Missouri Legislature. In 1953 the Missouri House killed such a bill, with Democratic Minority Floor Leader Roy Hamlin heading the opposition on the ground the bill would give the agency too much authority.

The bill introduced today specifies in detail the types of projects in which the agency can become interested, and adds one new type—sewage disposal plants. The agency has contended that present legislation was adequate, though using only general terms. Bond attorneys, however, recommended more specific wording.

The proposed legislation includes also a large number of technical changes intended to make the agency's bonds more marketable and thus carry lower interest rates. It was pointed out that the only bonds issued by the agency to date—$1,500,000 for a wharf at Granite City—pay the relatively high rate of 4¾ per cent interest.

Two years ago the Missouri Senate defeated a bill to contribute funds to assist the agency, while Illinois was passing a similar measure appropriating $28,430. Chief Engineer Milton M. Kinsey of the agency said today no additional funds would be sought at this time.

65 MORE BOOKED AS SPEEDERS, 11 AS JAYWALKERS

103 Ticketed for Other Traffic Violations in 24 Hours in Campaign for Safety.

Police picked up 65 speeders and 11 jaywalkers yesterday and early today in the drive to reduce reckless driving and careless walking. The figures are for the 24 hours ending at 7 a.m.

The speeders were booked for police court, while the careless walkers have the opportunity of settling their difficulties at the Police Traffic Bureau.

Also ticketed for police court appearances were 103 other "moving" violators, including careless drivers.

With snow predicted in the city, traffic officers were prepared to park their motorcycles and switch to scout cars, which, while not as efficient for traffic work, are safer in bad weather.

Fined $252 on 5 Charges.

Walter Verheecke, 1523 Destrehan street, today was fined $252 on five traffic charges by Police Judge Morris Rosenthal.

The fines were as follows: Driving when intoxicated, $100; careless driving, $75; leaving the scene of an accident, $50; driving in the wrong direction on a one-way street, $25, and failure to have a license, $2. Verheecke, driving a friend's automobile, collided head-on with an automobile that was being backed into a parking place in the 3300 block of North Eleventh street last Saturday night. Police testified a test showed he was intoxicated.

Stanley D. McCoy, 767 North Euclid avenue, was fined $100 by Judge Rosenthal on a charge of driving when intoxicated. Police said he was arrested last Saturday after "weaving" in traffic in the 4200 block of Delmar boulevard.

Charges Nol Prossed.

In the court of Judge Robert G. Dowd, charges of careless driving and driving the wrong way on a one-way street against Thomas Meehan, 4178A Shaw boulevard, were nol prossed yesterday. Meehan was arrested Dec. 25 on St. Charles street, near Broadway.

Charges of leaving the scene of an accident and careless driving on Dec. 29 against Raymond B. Doyel, 7815 Blackberry avenue, University City, were nol prossed. He was arrested in the 200 block of North Kingshighway.

A charge of careless driving against Henry A. McAlexander, O'Fallon, Mo., was nol prossed. He was arrested Jan. 1. Charges of careless driving and destruction of property against Harry R. Seddon, 2315A Cherokee street, were nol prossed. He was arrested Dec. 30 at Twelfth boulevard and Pine street.

Japs May Bar Triple Features.

TOKYO, Jan. 18 (AP)—Concerned over the long hours Japanese spend in theaters, the Welfare Ministry is planning a 2½-hour limit on movies. That would end the popular triple feature.

Jerry Lewis Offers $10,000 For Arrest of Cousin's Killer

MRS. ALEX LANZNER, cousin of comedian Jerry Lewis, who suffered fatal beating in robbery.

New Jersey Woman Fatally Beaten — Was 'Like a Sister to Me,' Comedian Says.

IRVINGTON, N.J., Jan. 18 (UP) — Comedian Jerry Lewis yesterday offered a $10,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the thug who fatally beat Lewis's cousin.

The victim, Mrs. Alex Lanzner, died in Irvington General Hospital Sunday. Mrs. Lanzner, a photograph retoucher and wife of a musician, was attacked Friday night as she walked home from a grocery.

Max Deutsche, the town's civilian special services officer, said Lewis talked with him by telephone from Las Vegas, Nev., and made the reward offer. Mrs. Lanzner and Lewis were childhood playmates in Irvington.

"If it's the last thing I do I hope I help get him," Lewis said at Las Vegas. "But that won't bring her back.

"My folks were always on the road. She was like a sister to me. We lived in the same house and we loved each other like brother and sister."

The comedian said he saw his cousin only 10 days ago when he and his wife flew back to New York just to see Mrs. Lanzner and her parents, his uncle and aunt.

"The family called me at the Sands Hotel here Saturday night after my last show and told me what had happened," he said. "I'm still a little numb. I talked to police in Irvington today and they said they had no leads. That's why I hoped a reward might bring out some information."

9 BRITISH PILOTS TO FLY FOR NEW GERMAN AIRLINE

HAMBURG, Germany, Jan. 18 (UP)—Nine British airmen who flew against Nazi Germany arrived yesterday to fly the American-built planes of the new German Lufthansa Airline.

The pilots, on a one-year loan from British European Airways, will wear German uniforms. German pilots are not allowed to operate planes over German territory under existing Allied restrictions.

The Lufthansa will start international service April 1.

GROCER BEATEN, ROBBED OF $150 OUTSIDE STORE

Attacked by Robber Armed With Rifle—3 Other Holdups by Man With Knife.

David Tegman, grocer, was robbed of $150 and beaten last night by a man armed with a rifle, who held up Tegman outside his market at 917 Academy avenue.

Tegman and Wendell Smith, 15-year-old clerk, had gotten into Tegman's automobile, parked beside the store. A Negro carrying a rifle appeared and pulled Tegman from the machine. After taking the grocer's wallet, containing the money, the robber knocked his victim down, then fled. Smith, who lives at 5158 Kensington avenue, ran to a drug store and called police.

Three holdups were committed early today by a man who threatened his victims with a large knife. The first robbery occurred after the man called a taxicab to the 5400 block of Maple avenue, where he stepped from a curb with a knife and robbed Miss Dorothy Rhodes, 3106 Easton avenue, a passenger, of her purse containing $34.

Several hours later a man pressed a knife against the throat of Richard Shephard, a taxicab driver, at Belt and Pershing avenues and took Shephard's wallet. The wallet contained only papers.

At 4:45 a.m. a man with a large knife appeared at the Westgate Hotel, 706 North Kingshighway, jumped over the counter and threatened Morris Gaskill, night clerk. The man took $100 from the cash drawer, and fled.

William Papamanolis and Steve Afentoulis, operators of a market at 2318 North Euclid avenue, were held up in their store and robbed of $44 last night. The robbers, Negroes, were armed with a revolver and a knife.

Robert Norman, Negro mail clerk, was held up early today near his home, 5223 Minerva avenue by four Negroes who took $22 from him and drove away in an automobile.

EX-DEPUTY BURKE'S TRIAL IS CONTINUED TO MARCH 14

The case of former St. Louis County Deputy Sheriff Nicholas Burke, charged with assault to kill in the shooting of Chief Deputy William Smith at a sheriff's office barbecue party June 25, 1953, was continued to March 14 by Circuit Judge John A. Witthaus yesterday.

The judge acted on his own motion in resetting the case from Feb. 28, pointing out that he anticipated his docket would be less crowded on the March date. He had ordered a continuance last Nov. 28, following the death of his son.

COLE FOR EASING RESTRICTION ON PUBLIC HOUSING

Will Tell Congress Limiting Projects to Slum-Displaced Persons is Handicap to Program.

By JAMES DEAKIN
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 — Housing Administrator Albert M. Cole said today he would ask Congress to modify a provision of the 1954 housing act which has restricted the low-cost public housing program.

Cole said the provision, written into the basic housing law for the first time last year, "has proved to be too restrictive to permit the new public housing program authorized in the housing act of 1954 to be carried out."

The limitation requires municipalities applying for public housing contracts to certify that all new units will house only persons who have been displaced by slum clearance or "other governmental action" in the community. This has made it difficult for some cities to qualify for federal housing aid.

Restriction Criticized.

Representative Brent Spence (Dem.), Kentucky, chairman of the House Banking Committee, has charged that the restriction will prevent cities from obtaining more than 10,000 of the 35,000 low-cost units authorized last year.

Cole said his recommendation was one of a series of changes in the housing law and increases or extensions of authority he will seek from Congress this year. Others would:

1. Authorize the remaining 70,000 public housing units President Eisenhower has requested for the next two years, at the rate of 35,000 a year. This would complete the Administration's four-year program of 140,000 units.

2. Increase federal aid for urban renewal, through an additional appropriation of $500,000,000 and extension of existing programs which apply in this field.

3. Increase the Federal Housing Administration's general mortgage insurance authorization by five billion dollars and clarify various mortgage insurance regulations to make it easier for some home owners to get FHA-insured home loans.

Cole's recommendations were addressed to the House and Senate Banking Committees, which handle housing legislation. The housing administrator met with committee members last week in an attempt to solve the problem presented by the restriction on public housing.

Sound Plan, Says Cole.

Cole said the provision admitting only slum displaced persons to public housing projects was "essentially sound, and I think we should adhere to (it) to the fullest extent possible."

"However," he added, "the technical legal effect of the requirements, as applied to existing circumstances, has proved to be too restrictive." Cole said the restriction should be "modified to the extent necessary to permit the authorized number of public housing units to be built, while maintaining the basic purpose of meeting the relocation needs of displaced families."

CIO-PAC SPENT $755,032 IN ITS 1954 ACTIVITIES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 (AP) —The CIO Political Action Committee reported to Congress yesterday that it spent $755,032 in its political and educational activities during 1954. This was $74,000 more than it took in. The CIO-PAC report was filed with the clerk of the House under a requirement of the election laws.

The organization, which usually backs Democratic candidates, previously had reported expenditures of $683,417 through last October.

Recent expenditures listed included contributions of $3000 to the unsuccessful campaign of John Carroll for Senator in Colorado; $5000 to help finance a vote recount in the Ohio senatorial election, and $3000 to the Ohio State CIO-PAC.

The United Steel Workers of American political action fund reported total 1954 expenditures of $185,004 and contributions of $128,862.

Previously large Democratic organizations had reported spending $2,822,631 last year and Republican organizations $3,716,184. Yesterday's reports bring the Democratic total to $3,079,250.

LOUIS G. BERRA IS NAMED 24TH WARD COMMITTEEMAN

Louis G. (Midge) Berra, former Alderman, was elected committeeman from the Twenty-fourth Ward last night at a meeting of the Democratic City Committee at Hotel Jefferson. Norvell F. Geohegan was named committeeman from the Twelfth Ward.

The committee also heard two speakers on the proposed Metropolitan Transit Authority, which will be submitted to voters of St. Louis and St. Louis county next Tuesday.

Alfred Schindler, former Under Secretary of Commerce in the Truman Administration, spoke against the plan. Donald Gun, lawyer and former Collector of Internal Revenue here, argued in favor of the proposal. Both were members of the transit board of freeholders. Committee members took no position on the plan.

CIO WILL FIGHT PROPOSED 1-CENT SALES TAX RISE

State Group Says Levy Hits Small Earnings Hardest — Threatens Referendum.

By HERBERT A. TRASK
State Political Correspondent of The Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 18— Strong opposition to a proposal to increase the state sales tax from 2 to 3 per cent to finance rehabilitation of Missouri's penal and mental institutions and additional school aid, was expressed today by the legislative committee of the Missouri State CIO Council.

James A. Davis, executive secretary of the council, declared the state CIO was "unalterably opposed" to increasing the sales tax because it would primarily hit small wage earners.

While in favor of the proposed improvement program, Davis said the CIO committee believed that some other method of raising the necessary additional state revenue should be found, so that the "greatest burden will not fall upon those least able to pay."

Referendum Threat.

Davis said the committee, which held a policy meeting here last weekend, decided to force a vote by the people on any sales tax increase approved by the Legislature. He declared that, if the legislature failed to submit the proposal to the state's voters, his organization will circulate initiative petitions for a referendum on the issue.

The CIO committee called on Gov. Phil M. Donnelly or the Legislature to appoint a committee to study the problem and recommend other means of raising the funds. The committee, Davis said, should be composed of legislators and representatives of business and labor.

A more realistic approach, Davis contended, would be to increase the state income tax and revise property assessments in the state. A 25 per cent increase in income taxes, Davis said, would be adequate to retire the $75,000,000 state bond issue recommended by Gov. Donnelly to finance a rebuilding program for penal and eleemosynary institutions and state-supported universities and colleges.

Small Incomes Hit Hardest.

"The average weekly wage in Missouri is about $71, of which at least $30 is spent for food," Davis said. "A 50 per cent increase in the sales tax would hit hardest at persons of small incomes, who must spend most of their money for food, clothing and other necessities subject to the sales tax."

Pending before the Senate are two proposals to increase the sales tax from 2 to 3 per cent. The additional 1 per cent levy would bring in about $45,000,000 a year.

Davis said the CIO group has no objection to development of new prison industries to keep the inmates occupied, as long as the products are used to supply the needs of state institutions and agencies.

NEW INDICTMENT OF LATTIMORE IS DISMISSED

Indictment was assigned to Youngdahl. Rover took the unprecedented step—unprecedented for the Government — of charging him with prejudice and bias unfitting him to pass on the case. This brought an indignant rejection from the judge who called the charge "scandalous." In his decision today Youngdahl made no mention of the accusation of prejudice.

The decision today marks another stage in what has become one of the most celebrated cases in American legal and political history. The fact that he is one of Lattimore's counsel was used against Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney of Wyoming in his successful effort last fall to regain his Senate seat. When Youngdahl heard arguments on the motion to dismiss the indictment in November, O'Mahoney argued, that the indictment represented an effort to try Lattimore for his opinions, contrary to the guarantees of free speech in the constitution.

Thurman Arnold, chief counsel for Lattimore, said after today's decision that he will press for trial of the five counts which still stand. These involve names and dates brought out in the course of Lattimore's lengthy testimony before the Senate committee. The Far Eastern expert was subjected to one of the most prolonged interrogations in Senate history.

Youngdahl Remarks.

Youngdahl in his decision said he was accepting the Government's contention that "the allegations of the indictment must be accepted as they are written." The indictment does not, according to the judge, "as a matter of law inform the accused of the nature and cause of the accusation against him. Neither does it charge an offense with reasonable clarity so that the accused can make his defense, nor furnish the accused with such a description of the charge that he would be able to avail himself of his conviction or acquittal for protection against a further prosecution for the same cause."

In a footnote Youngdahl added:

"The court has passed on the indictment without going beyond it, even for explanatory material. However, the proposition that certain excerpts from the writings of an accused may be taken out of context and historical setting to form an indictment, while the accused is prohibited from placing them in proper context on a motion to dismiss, rings untrue to our traditional American concept of fair play"

No Accepted Definition.

Discussing the phrase "follower of the Communist line" used in one count of the indictment, Youngdahl said that it "has no universally accepted definition." He then added:

"The Government has defined it in one way and seeks to impute its definition to the defendant. Defendant has declined to adopt it, offering a definition of his own. It would not necessitate great ingenuity to think up definitions differing from those offered either by the Government or defendant. By groundless surmise only could the jury determine which definition defendant had in mind."

Since the perjury charge was first brought Lattimore has been on leave of absence with pay from his position as head of the Walter Hines Page school of international relations at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore. He has repeatedly denied under oath the original charge by Senator Joseph McCarthy that he was a "Soviet espionage agent" or in any way connected with the Communist party. The Government has never charged him with being an agent or a party member.

FOUR CONVICTS SEIZE 5 GUARDS AND DEMAND CAR

guard hostages as Harrington, Thomas D. Ryan, Gerard Kadlick, Martin S. Mulkern and Eugene Wills.

First reports that wholesale delivery of the 600 inmates was being attempted brought 200 heavily-armed Boston and state police to the scene.

They were withdrawn from their positions about the ancient stone prison after officials determined that the revolt was confined to the isolated two story brick cell block known as the Cherry Hill section.

Crude Ladder Found.

Prison guards found in the yard a crude ladder made of pieces of wood, wire, pieces of belting and a necktie.

Vance said the prisoners first captured three guards before dawn. When those three failed to report on schedule, the other two went to check and were ambushed.

That prompted an alarm which brought police details, armed with riot guns. The Cherry Hill section is used for men held in solitary.

In the early morning hours between the time of the alarm and the isolation of the revolt there was much yelling and jeering by the convicts at police on guard in the old prison, scene of several riots and escapes in recent years.

RED CHINESE SEIZE NATIONALIST-HELD ISLAND OUTPOST

target of the first Chinese Communist air raid on Nationalist territory Nov. 1. Just a week ago today the Reds raided the Tachens with 100 planes, their heaviest strike.

In that raid more than 140,000 pounds of food donated by the American people to the needy of Nationalist China were destroyed, United States officials said today.

That was about 70 per cent of the total sent to the Tachens.

Eisenhower Briefs G.O.P. Leaders on Red Attack.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 (AP)—President Eisenhower today briefed Republican congressional leaders on the Chinese Communists' attack on Yikiangshan.

Senate Republican Leader Knowland of California told newsmen about the briefing at the G.O.P. leaders' regular Tuesday meeting with the President at the White House.

Knowland said the report dealt with the "Chinese Communist attack on one of the northernmost islands" of the Nationalists. He obviously was referring to Yikiangshan.

It was announced that Adm. Arthur W. Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, would have an afternoon conference with the President.

A. E. L. GARDNER PROVIDED $6500 IN BEQUESTS IN WILL

Former State Senator A. E. L. Gardner of Kirkwood left his estate, after payment of $6500 in bequests, to his two daughters, under terms of his will filed in probate court at Clayton today.

The will provided a $5000 bequest to Miss Dorothy Lyons of University City, his secretary for 34 years. Bequests of $100 each were stipulated for his five grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren. The will directs that the rest of the estate be divided equally between his daughters, Mrs. Hiram F. Liggett of Clayton and Mrs. Herbert Hausman of Ellisville. No estimate of the estate's value was given.

Mr. Gardner, a lawyer, served in the State Senate from 1905 to 1921. He was active in Republican politics in St. Louis county for many years. Mr. Gardner died Jan. 7 at his home, 619 North Clay avenue, Kirkwood. He was 87 years old.

$51,491 RAISED IN YULETIDE TREE OF LIGHTS CAMPAIGN

The 1954 Salvation Army Tree of Lights Christmas cheer program raised a total of $51,491 in the campaign, Maj. Olin Brigman, local commander of the organization, announced last night at "dutch treat" dinner at Downtown Y.M.C.A.

The money raised provided 8449 persons with food and a total of 6171 children received fruit and candy at community Christmas parties sponsored by the Salvation Army, Brigman said.

Other services included 10,984 patients in hospitals, infirmaries and jails who received treats, 816 dinners served to homeless men, 3500 gift boxes for overseas service men, and nearly 9000 toys for children.

CHARLES HERMAN APPOINTED TO COUNCIL POST IN LADUE

Charles Herman, 27 Deer Creek Woods, was appointed to the Ladue City Council from Ward 3 last night, succeeding Dick Oliver, who resigned. Edwin F. Johnston, an attorney, of 10041 Conway road was appointed police judge to replace Herman, who resigned from that post to become councilman.

The appointments were made by acting Mayor Alvan J. Goodbar and were approved by the council. Herman and Johnston will serve until the April municipal elections. Oliver, a retired insurance company executive, gave ill health as the reason for his resignation. He had served since 1942. Herman, a Mercantile Trust Co. vice president, had been police judge for about eight years.

WILSON W. CONDICT ELECTED

Wilson W. Condict, advertising director of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, today was elected president of the Newspaper Advertising Executive Association, at the annual meeting of the association in Chicago. He succeeds Donald M. Bernard, of Washington, D.C.

Other officers elected were: Karl T. Finn, Cincinnati Times-Star, first vice president; G. P. Swanson, Spokesman Review, Spokane, Wash., second vice president; Robert C. Pace, Danville, Ill., re-elected secretary.

FOUR IN CABINET URGE FOREIGN TRADE PROGRAM

Wilson Says Showdown With Russia May Be Economic, Not on Field of Battle.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 (UP)—Four Cabinet members testified today that President Eisenhower's proposed foreign trade program is necessary to the free world's security and will benefit American business.

Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson said a "final showdown" with Russia may not come on the field of battle, but in "economic, political and propaganda areas."

Wilson and his colleagues appeared before the House Ways and Means Committee in support on the Administration's request for a three-year renewal of the reciprocal trade program with new presidential tariff-cutting powers.

Strength for West.

Wilson said expansion of trade would strengthen the United States and its allies in its opposition to Communism.

Secretary of Treasury George M. Humphrey said Mr. Eisenhower's program should help reduce Government spending for foreign aid by helping foreign countries to pay for United States goods with their own products.

Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks sought to allay fears expressed by some American manufacturers that the reciprocal program would mean a sharp increase in competitive imports.

Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell testified the trade program would have a "two-fold benefit to the worker"—producing lower consumer prices as a result of increased imports and creating many jobs in the handling of imports and exports.

He rejected the argument that lower tariffs were responsible for the large part of unemployment during the last two years. Mitchell said surveys indicate "only a very small fraction of current unemployment" can be traced to the effects of imports.

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles and Secretary of Agriculture Ezra T. Benson were witnesses yesterday.

Trade With Reds.

Wilson told the committee he favors trading in carefully-screened non-strategic materials with Iron Curtain countries.

Asked to cite an example, Wilson said:

"I would trade butter for (Russian) manganese. We have more butter than we need and less manganese."

Representative Harrison (Dem.), Virginia, said it would be "disastrous" if this country ever became dependent on Communists for supplies such as manganese. Wilson said he would stockpile such items and not eliminate any American production.

Wilson's Views.

Wilson testified that the United States "must move in the direction of removing unreasonable restrictions to international trade" in order to help its allies "maintain basic living standards for their people" and bolster their economies.

Wilson said it will be "difficult" to prevent the rest of the free world from trading in strategic items with the Soviet bloc, unless free world trade is expanded under the three-year tariff cutting program. He said the United States should provide "as large a market as possible" for its allies to whom trade is vital.

Weeks, a former director of the National Association of Manufacturers, noted that the program would permit the President to negotiate "selective" tariff reductions of 5 per cent a year for three years.

This would mean, he said, that an item now subject to a 20 per cent duty would have its duty reduced to 19 per cent the first year and be cut only one additional percentage point in each of the next two years.

'Escape Clause.'

"I am sure that a reduction at this rate over a period of three years could not work serious harm on efficiently managed United States industries and, if perchance our generalization is ill-founded, the damaged industry has recourse to 'escape clause' action," he said.

Benson said the program will help "hold and expand the foreign markets for our farm products" which are necessary to hold down domestic surpluses. He expressed fear that one provision of the bill could be used to interfere with present authority to curb imports of competing farm products when they threaten to disrupt domestic farm support programs. He felt the language should be modified to make sure the bill could not be so construed.

Charles B. Shuman, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, presented a three-point economic program which ignored Mr. Eisenhower's request for tariff-cutting powers. The farm bureau's program urged expansion of international trade on the basis of mutual advantage to the trading countries; flexible farm price supports, and continued use of federal credit policies to support a "general price level" without standby price and wage control.

SENATE HONORS KINNEY WITH A STANDING VOTE

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 18 (AP)—Senator Michael Kinney (Dem.), St. Louis, was honored by a standing vote of the Missouri Senate yesterday as the dean of the Legislature with one of the longest records of public service in the nation.

Kinney was 80 years old last Thursday but the Senate was not in session that day, so it eulogized him and presented his birthday bouquet yesterday. He is starting his forty-second year in the Senate.

Spokesmen of both parties praised his long record of service and Senator Edward V. Long (Dem.), Clarksville, said Kinney had become a living tradition in the Senate.

MRS. LUCE SAYS SURVIVAL HINGES ON WORLD TRADE

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 18 (UP)—Clare Boothe Luce, United States Ambassador to Italy, last night urged the United States to widen its world markets as a matter of survival.

She said a world economic policy might fit us better for survival than atomic energy, stating that "the arithmetic of nuclear explosions may be momentarily reassuring, but it is not conclusive."

Mrs. Luce told the annual banquet of the Poor Richard Club that allies denied markets in the United States would trade behind the Iron Curtain.

Mrs. Luce, who became the first woman ever presented the club's gold medal award for achievement, said the fate of President Eisenhower's foreign economic program "may mean life or death for the economies of Europe and of Asia.

M'DONNELL AIRCRAFT INCOME IS DOWN FOR 6-MONTH PERIOD

Earnings of McDonnell Aircraft Corp. after taxes were $1,998,817 for the six-month period ended last Dec. 31, the first half of its fiscal year, J. S. McDonnell, president, reported today. The figure represents earnings of $2.77 a share on outstanding stock, compared with $2.95 a share in the comparable portion of the preceding year.

In the first half of fiscal 1954 earnings for the company after taxes totaled $2,028,210. The company had 685,758 outstanding shares then, compared with 720,000 in the six months just ended.

Sales in the first half of the current fiscal year were $65,758,938, compared with $66,715,018 in the first half of the previous year. The backlog as of last Dec. 31 was $348,804,610, of which $338,850,421 was authorized for expenditure by the Government. A year earlier the backlog was $441,371,868, with $364,847,230 authorized for expenditure. All contracts are subject to termination at the convenience of the Government. The company had 13,021 employes as of last Dec. 31.

YEAR'S FIRST WATERMELONS

A truck load of Cuban watermelons arrived on Produce Row Tuesday, the earliest that watermelons have ever made their appearance in the city, a spokesman said.

The melons, of the Watson variety, weigh 20 to 30 pounds each and are priced at 10 cents a pound wholesale. The Independent Fruit & Produce Co., 64 Produce Row, received the shipment.

BILL TO PAY PUPIL TRANSPORT FEE TO ANY SCHOOL

House Measure Seeks to End Dispute Over State Fund Use by Parochial Children.

By EDWARD H. THORNTON
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 18—All Missouri school children between 6 and 16 years old would be provided free transportation to and from school, regardless of what school they attend, under provisions of a bill introduced in the House yesterday.

The measure, submitted by State Representative Jennie S. Walsh (Dem.), St. Louis, is designed to settle the long dispute over the use of state money for transportation of parochial school students. Transportation of any but public school pupils is not permissible under present law, the Missouri Attorney General's Office has ruled.

Mrs. Walsh's bill would create a division of free motor bus transportation for school children within the Department of Public Health and Welfare. The division would be headed by a director who would be directed to provide transportation either through purchase of rental equipment or through contract. The director would receive $10,000 a year salary.

All costs of the transportation would be paid out of the state's general revenue fund, but the individual counties and the City of St. Louis would be required to reimburse the state for all costs in excess of $4 a month for each child given transportation within its limits.

Highway Patrol Bills.

State Representative Thomas D. Graham (Dem.), Jefferson City, introduced a series of bills recommended by Col. Hugh Waggoner, superintendent of the State Highway Patrol. Salary increases for all uniformed members of the patrol would be provided by one of them.

It would raise the salary of the superintendent from $6800 to $9000 a year. Other increases would be: Majors, $5100 to $5400 annually; captains, $4500 to $4800; lieutenants, $3900 to $4200; sergeants, $3600 to $3900, and troopers, $3300 to $3600.

Missouri voters would be asked to approve two proposed constitutional amendments under terms of resolutions introduced by Representative Richard H. Ichord (Dem.), Houston.

One of these would require regular annual sessions of the Legislature, with those held in the even-numbered years being restricted to consideration of appropriations measures and matters specifically called to the legislators' attention by the governor.

The other constitutional change proposed by Ichord would lower the voting age in Missouri from 21 years to 18.

Advancing Primary Date.

Ichord introduced a bill which would advance the date of primary elections from the first Tuesday in August to the second Tuesday in June, effective in 1956. The measure also would provide for conducting a presidential preferential primary election in conjunction with the state primary in presidential years. Party delegates from Missouri to national conventions would be bound to the popular-vote choice for the first two ballots on a presidential nominee.

Among other bills introduced in the House were three recommended by the State Division of Welfare.

One would increase the income that a blind person might have and still be eligible for benefits from $1800 to $2100 a year. The other two would clarify various sections of the state welfare laws.

Salaries of state Senators and Representatives would be increased from $125 to $250 a month and terms of Representatives would be lengthened to four years instead of two under proposed constitutional amendments introduced in the House today.

A bill introduced today by Representative Robert Smith (Dem.), Columbia, would provide for creation of a state water pollution control board within the division of health which would be charged with the preparation and supervision of a comprehensive plan to reduce existing pollution and prevent further pollution of Missouri waters. The measure is similar to one sponsored by Smith last session which failed to pass.

Other Bills Introduced.

Other bills introduced today included one to increase St. Louis public school teachers' retirement benefits to the level of state benefits, and another which would extend jurisdiction of St. Louis county magistrates to the entire county and permit organization of the magistrate court there into divisions.

Representative Leroy Tyus (Dem.), St. Louis, introduced a measure to repeal three sections of the Missouri statutes which require maintenance of separate public school facilities for Negroes.

On the Senate side, a measure which would advance the date of primary elections to the second Tuesday in June was introduced by four Senators, two Democrats and two Republicans.

A bill to establish six traveling psychiatric clinics as a major step toward modernization of Missouri's mental health program is ready for Senate consideration following its approval last night by the Senate Public Health Committee.

The clinics would serve all sections of the state, including large rural areas which do not now have competent local psychiatric services.

Sponsored by the Senate's Mental Health Study Committee, the bill is designed to inaugurate in Missouri a comprehensive program for the prevention of mental illnesses. Establishment of the clinics was recommended by the study committee after its 18-month survey of the state's mental hospitals and their programs.

POLICEMAN BEATEN IN FIGHT ON STREET

Probationary Officer Suspended During Inquiry Into Incident.

Probationary Patrolman Roland R. Price, who lost his service revolver and was knocked down in a street fight in the 4900 block of Delmar boulevard while off duty early today, was suspended by Chief of Police Jeremiah O'Connell pending an investigation of the incident.

Chief O'Connell said Price admitted having "some drinks" at two taverns and left a tavern a few minutes before becoming embroiled in a street fight between a man and a woman. He was attacked by the pair and two bystanders, witnesses reported.

Price, 23 years old, was in civilian clothes when he went to the assistance of a woman, who was being beaten by a man, he reported later from City Hospital. He said that after he identified himself as an officer, the pair stopped their fight and began beating him.

Witnesses said two men, who had been observing the struggle between the woman and the man, jumped on Price from behind. One assailant was heard to remark: "Here's a chance to get a policeman."

Overwhelmed by assailants, Price went down and his revolver, which he had drawn, was jerked from his grasp. The woman and the men ran to a parked automobile bearing Illinois license plates and drove away, leaving Price dazed on the sidewalk.

At the hospital the officer was pronounced suffering from head injuries and an injury of the neck, apparently the victim of a "rabbit punch." The son of veteran Sgt. Lyman Price of Page District, Patrolman Price lives with his parents at 5111 Shaw avenue.

AIRPORT IMPROVEMENT BIDS TO BE RECEIVED ON FEB. 23

The Board of Estimate and Apportionment today announced it will receive bids on Feb. 23 for improvements at the new terminal area at Lambert-St. Louis Field to cost an estimated $540,000.

One of the projects, estimated to cost $485,000, would be construction of parking lots near the new terminal, aprons, sidewalks, roadways, fences and storm drainage.

Another project, estimated at $30,000, would be laying of water lines for spraying and fire protection and construction of a sanitary sewer. The third, to cost about $25,000, would be for landscaping.

PENTAGON SENDS SERVICE PAY RISE BILL TO CONGRESS

Program Urged by Eisenhower Designed to Keep Good Men in Defense Forces.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 (AP) —A far-reaching revision of military pay schedules was submitted to Congress late yesterday by the Pentagon, which estimated it would cost nearly $730,000,000 in the next fiscal year.

The program spelled out details of President Eisenhower's recommendation to Congress last week that steps be taken to make career military service more attractive and to halt the loss of experienced officers and men.

The Pentagon says the program was designed specifically to encourage good men to stay in service. Besides pay boosts of up to 25 per cent, it calls for extra bonuses for hazardous duty and additional allowances to members of the regular forces.

No Increase Before Two Years.

No increases would go to any enlisted man until he had served at least two years nor to any officer until after three years.

The Army private first class, Marine Corps corporal, Navy seaman and Air Force airman second class (which are comparable ranks) would fare this way as compared with the present schedule.

This man, after two years of service, would jump $9.98 to $117 monthly, a rise of 9.33 per cent over existing pay. His next rise, after four years of service, would be 15.65 per cent, or $17.94 to $132.60 monthly. Under existing schedules he would go up to $122.30 after six years and to $129.95 after eight years. Under the new schedule he would receive no further increase until after his 10th year, when he would get $137.59, the same pay he now gets. Under both old and new plans this enlisted man would reach top pay of $152.88 after 14 years.

A man in the top enlisted grade (Army, Marine Corps, Air Force master sergeant and Navy chief petty officer) would go to $210.60 after two years under the new plan—an increase of $4.21 over existing pay. His next rise to $218.40, after four years, would be an increase of $4.37. After six years he would get $234, an increase of $12.32. After eight years he would get $253.50, an increase of $24.18. After 10 years his pay would be $261.30, an increase of $24.34. After 12 years $273, after 14 years $280.80, after 22 years, $319.80. This senior enlisted man would reach the top pay bracket after 26 years under both schedules. Under the new plan he would get $335.40, or $29.64 more than under the current program.

Officers' Pay.

In the commissioned officer category the second lieutenant or Navy ensign under the new schedule would get $296.40, a rise of $59.28 over the present schedule. After six years he would get $312, a rise of $45.24. After eight years his pay would be $327.60. After 10 years, $343.20. After 12 years, $368.80. This man would reach top pay of $374.40 after 14 years service, an increase of $48.36 over present scales.

The Navy captain and his equivalent ranking colonel in the other three services would get $624 after three years under the new scale, an increase of $31.20. If such an officer was not promoted, but remained in the service his next increase would not come until after 16 years service. Then he would be raised $47.58 to $655.20.

After 18 years he would get $717.60, after 22 years $748.80, after 27 years, $780, and his top pay of $811.20 would come after 30 years service, an increase of $85.02.

NATIONAL GUARD CONTROL ENDS IN PHENIX CITY, ALA.

PHENIX CITY, Ala., Jan. 18 (UP) — National Guard control ended in this city today after more than seven months of military occupation to clean up vice conditions.

Lt. Col. Jack A. Warren, the first guardsman to arrive June 19, was the last to leave last midnight from this former pleasure spot for nearby Fort Benning (Ga.) soldiers.

Military occupation began a few hours after Attorney General-nominee Albert L. Patterson was murdered by a gunman in an alley June 18. His death touched off the vast cleanup he promised to give Phenix City had he lived to take office.

A new slate of civilian law enforcement officers, and many new city and county officials, were in office today.

ESCAPED CONVICT CAPTURED

A man who said he was Clarence Miller, decorator, living in the 2500 block of Bacon street, was arrested yesterday by detectives who said they identified him through fingerprints as a convict who escaped from the Missouri penitentiary Nov. 21, 1947.

Miller, 44 years old, a Negro, had been serving a 75-year term for robbery, the officers said. He was sentenced at Caruthersville in 1935.

CAN YOU GO TO ALASKA
June or September?
HAWAII
April or July?

If so, you have a bargain. And you will be on a cruise of highest quality, escorted, with friendly companions.

Most travelers to Alaska, you know, insist on July or August, when ships are crowded. They don't realize that June and September, too, are wonderful months in the Northwest, the Inside Passage, Alaska and Canadian Rockies. And, Hawaii, most travelers ask for January and February, but April and July cruises are equally good.

So we offer you choice of departures June 8 or August 31 to Alaska; or for Hawaii, you may leave March 30 or July 6.

Each trip requires three weeks, costs less than ordinary cruises and represents a bargain for a quality vacation. The trips are under the trustworthy auspices of the Agricultural and Passenger departments of the Northern Pacific Railway, and while essentially for farm families, city folks will enjoy them too.

Please send for free folders, "Alaska" or "Hawaii", or both, Address: NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY, 919 Boatmen's Bank Bldg., St. Louis 2, Mo.

G.I.s in German Border Area Tough and Fit, McAuliffe Says

General of Seventh Army Says Draftees Learn Fast — Life in Frosty Observation Posts Is Rugged.

By WILLIAM H. STONEMAN
Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Radio. Copyright, 1955.

EISENSTEIN, Germany, Jan. 18—Is the United States Army soft? Have we babied our troops? Would they be unfit to match the primitive soldiery of Russia and the Balkans in a tough cold-weather war?

"Forget it," is the answer of Lt. Gen. A. C. McAuliffe, a tough soldier who won fame at Bastogne during the Battle of the Bulge, by saying "nuts" to the Germans.

As commander of the United States Seventh Army, McAuliffe bosses the boys who would hit the Russians first if they attacked Western Germany. He is convinced that the men who man the five regular divisions and three armored cavalry regiments of his army are fighting fit.

"The fellows in this army are really tough," he says. "They can climb hills like billy goats and stand up to hardships like real men. They nearly break their backs on maneuvers and it is a question of having to hold them back.

"They spend more than half of their time away from barracks on training exercises, much of it out of doors.

"It is hard to compare troops in pescetime with troops that have been fighting over a long period. We have large numbers of draftees who dilute our experienced units and who are not tough when they arrive.

"But our troops learn fast and they have really good leadership. The United States Army has never been so well stocked with officers of high quality and extensive fighting experience. A large proportion of our officers have had fighting both in World War II and Korea. I should say that the Seventh Army is first-class."

McAuliffe's pride in the Seventh Army is justified by what you see in the ice-encrusted hills that mark the border between Communist Czechoslovakia and West Germany.

The southern sector of the frontier is constantly patrolled and watched, 24 hours a day, 12 months a year, by units of the Sixth Armored Cavalry Regiment.

Of the nine reconnaissance companies in the regiment two companies are on border duty at any one time, responsible for about 170 miles of frontier.

They man four border encampments from which units move out on daily jeep patrols, covering the entire distance between the camps. They also occupy seven observation posts, covering the seven natural lanes of approach from Czechoslovakia to Germany on this 170-mile stretch.

A member of a reconnaissance platoon normally spends one day in six in an observation post, another day on patrol, one day on leave, and the other three days on other duties.

Listening Beside Highway.

On a day like this, when the landscape is covered with snow and ice and the mercury is far below the freezing point, life in an observation post is tough.

At night, when members of the unit descend to lower ground and man an improvised listen-post beside the highway leading from Czechoslovakia, it becomes sheer purgatory. They have a stove of sorts in the observation post hut, perched high on the mountainside looking down into Czechoslovakia. They must remain in concealment beside the road and they cannot light a fire.

It is simply a question of sitting in a jeep and listening and rubbing your nose and hands to keep them from freezing.

Despite these rugged conditions there are no complaints of sickness. "You don't get sick by staying out in the fresh air," says Col. D. P. Christensen, commanding officer of the Sixth Cavalry Regiment. "These men are really fit."

The observation post was manned today by a group of city boys who could not be expected to stand the life as easily as farmer boys, but they were all in excellent condition.

St. Louisan in Outfit.

They include Cpl. Franklin Hupe, Aurora, Ill., who has been in the Army 21 months and in Germany 16 months; David King, St. Louis, in the Army 20 months and over here 14 months; Cpl. William Lewitt, Philadelphia, who has been in the Army 21 months and over here 15 months; and Gary Hilts of Montrose, Mich., who has been in the Army one year and in Germany six months.

At the camp we met Cpl. Chester Kropiwiec, Chicago, who has been in the Army 22 months and over here 15 months. He was just back from 24 hours of frosty duty in the Eisenstein post.

We visited the observation post with Second Lt. Timothy Mahoney, Chicago, who was graduated from the University of Illinois in 1953 and has been in the Army 16 months. As platoon commander he was in charge of the border camp at nearby Regen and of all operations in this sector.

None of these men seemed to be impressed by the rugged conditions in which they were serving.

"The equipment is mighty good and we don't suffer much," they explained. "The listening post is awfully cold along about dawn but we can stand it."

The fact that everybody goes on 24 hours leave just after serving in the observation post may help the boys to bear up.

AIR IS BEING UTILIZED TO SUBDIVIDE THE INCH

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 18 (UP)—Scientists now can divide air into such tiny streams that it is possible to divide an inch into millionths.

W. I. Wilt and H. Kiefaber, of the Sheffield Corp., Dayton, O., told a meeting here of the American Society of Tool Engineers that "new ways are being found every day in which air can be used to divide that inch smaller."

Such revolutionary developments, they said, "make it easier for production and inspection people to turn out and accept good parts in accordance with prints at lower cost of production."

HIDDEN ELECTRIC DEVICE WEIGHS TRUCKS ON ROAD

SALEM, Ore., Jan. 18 (UP)—An electric device for weighing trucks in motion has been installed on the Pacific highway north of here.

Concealed under the surface of the road, the truck scale cannot be distinguished from an ordinary crack in the pavement. Oregon is the first state to install such a type of scale on a highway. R. H. Baldock, state highway engineer, said:

"This in-motion weighing device might enable us to do some pioneering in highway research. At present, weighing trucks for highway planning and design purposes involves stopping vehicle and getting a sample measure. Truck operators often object to being delayed.

"They have used circuitous routes to avoid the weighing stations, even where no law enforcement is involved and the data are used only for highway planning."

Baldock said other states are watching the experiment. Previous use of electronic scales has been limited to weighing commercial and military aircraft in order to determine their centers of gravity.

And Proud of It.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 18 (UP)—Those new automobiles may look mighty pretty, but one motorist figures he'll stick with his 15-year-old model for a good reason. The motorist was spotted driving along in his 1940 model with a sign on the automobile which said: "Out of date—but out of debt."

SEARCH ON FOR 13 IN DOWNED PLANE

St. Louisan Among Those on Craft That Fell in Sea —All Believed Dead.

STEPHENVILLE, Nfld., Jan. 18 (UP)—An air-sea search was under way today for the bodies of 13 persons believed killed yesterday when a Navy Super-Constellation crashed in the Gulf of St. Lawrence off Newfoundland after engine failure.

Among the 13 presumed dead were a woman, Wave Jeanette E. Elmer, 22 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Elmer of Syracuse, N. Y., and a St. Louisan, Pfc. Ronnie Carr, 21.

The Constellation took off early yesterday morning from Harmon Air Force Base in Newfoundland for a flight to Patuxent, Md. At 5 a.m., when over Prince Edward Island, two of its four engines failed. It headed back for Harmon and a B-29 was sent out to watch over it.

Twelve minutes after the planes made contact the Constellation shut off its lights and other electrical equipment to permit the dumping of fuel to reduce weight. Within minutes the bomber lost radar contact with the transport and it vanished. The bomber circled the area, finally sighting life rafts at 6:45 a.m. No sign of life was reported. Other planes searched the area without success.

Five empty life rafts were picked up today.

Miss Elmer's family said in Syracuse, that they received a letter from her only yesterday saying she was going to ask to be taken off the flight because she was ill with a cold. She was a flight orderly aboard the transport.

Lt. Comdr. Len Relle Fulmer Jr., Lexington Park, Md., was the plane's commander and Lt. Ronald R. Chapman of Kansas City, Mo., was co-pilot. It carried a crew of six and seven Air Force and Army passengers.

Pfc. Carr, a Negro, was on an emergency leave to visit his mother, Mrs. Louise Carr, 2802½ Cass avenue, who is in Homer G. Phillips Hospital suffering from a blood ailment.

Carr, 21 years old, was inducted into the Army in August 1953. He is stationed in Newfoundland with a motor pool. He attended Vashon High School.

Woman Bank President.

STEWARTSVILLE, Mo., Jan. 18 (AP)—Miss Nell Snow has been elected president of the First National Bank of Stewartsville. She started in the bank as a bookkeeper and became cashier in 1933 when her father, W. D. Snow, became president.

SHARP DISPUTE RISES OVER SCHOOL SURVEY

'$50,000 Piece of Paper,' Morrell Says—Stolar Defends It.

A sharp dispute over the benefits of a recent survey of non-teaching operations of the St. Louis schools flared briefly today at a Board of Education committee meeting.

James F. Morrell, member of the board's evaluation committee, termed the survey report a "$50,000 piece of paper." The board paid A. T. Kearney & Co., Chicago firm of business consultants, that amount for the study, completed last fall.

H. M. Stolar, another committee member and board president, accused Morrell of attempting to undermine confidence in the survey. "You've never shared our confidence in the Kearney experts and your whole purpose is to slow down improvements they recommended," Stolar told Morrell.

The exchange was initiated when the committee considered a request by the St. Louis Public School Patrons' Alliance that the School Board appoint a citizens committee to go over the Kearney report and make recommendations which would be binding on the board.

Committee chairman Charles H. Christel and Stolar, indicating they presently opposed the request, voted to postpone action. They are from the board's "blue ribbon" group.

Morrell, a member of the "old guard" faction, said he strongly favored a citizens committee to resolve the doubts raised by some Kearney opponents.

The evaluation committee voted to have a special board meeting sometime in February for board members and executive officers to present their views on the Kearney findings and to question representatives of the survey firm. The Kearney officials would be given an opportunity to speak generally, as well as answer specific questions.

The consultants said the board could save $1,487,000 a year, in its non-teaching operations, mostly in the building department, by adopting more businesslike methods.

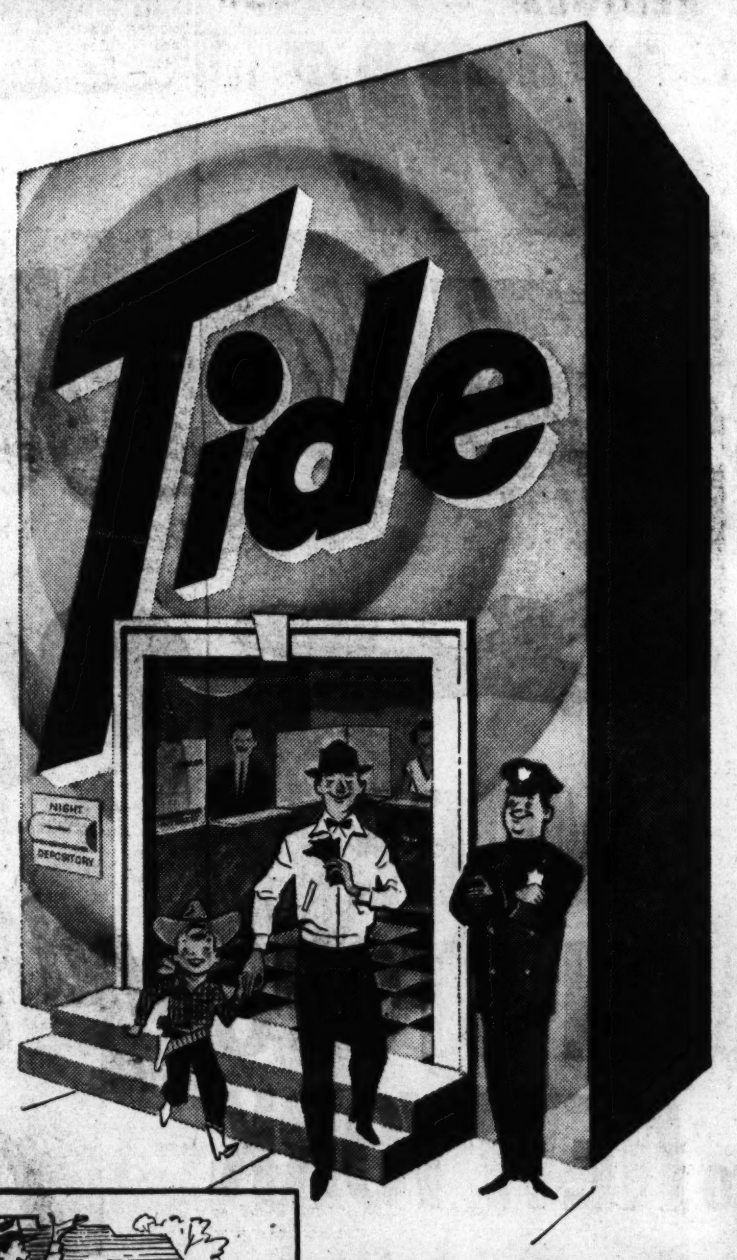
There's a bonus for St. Louis in each package of TIDE!

The Tide that is shipped from the Procter & Gamble factory here in St. Louis serves in homes throughout this section of the country. Each package leaves an extra "dividend" for everyone in town—better business, better jobs, better living.

In fact, the success of every P & G product is reflected everywhere in town. And Procter & Gamble is working full time to help make this bonus for folks in St. Louis even bigger in years to come.



Better Business!

Most of the dollars that Tide brings to St. Louis go into P & G payroll and plant-operating expenditures—are quickly passed on to local businesses. Whenever possible Procter & Gamble buys the supplies and services it needs right here in town.

Better Jobs!

Employees at Procter & Gamble are able to help make better jobs for others because they enjoy unusually steady jobs themselves—are year-'round customers for local business of all kinds. Procter & Gamble's famous employment plan guarantees eligible employees 48 weeks' work each year—in addition to profit-sharing and pension benefits.

Better Living!

Tax money paid by P & G and other leading local industries benefits the entire community. It helps provide safer streets, better schools and parks. P & G people like it this way. In fact, many of them work as private citizens for the betterment of St. Louis. For this is, after all, their home town, too.

M'CARTHY'S OLD COMMITTEE GETS NEW SET OF RULES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 (UP)—Senator Joseph R. McCarthy's old investigating subcommittee, now under Democratic control, today got new rules designed to protect rights of witnesses.

Chairman John L. McClellan said the new rules for the Senate Permanent Investigating subcommittee "are an improvement over some practices that possibly have been indulged in in the past."

The new rules were adopted by unanimous vote of the Government Operations Committee, parent body of the investigating group. In many respects they closely follow a suggested uniform code suggested recently by a Senate Rules subcommittee.

They provide that witnesses may be questioned only by members or by authorized subcommittee staff personnel; any person mentioned in what he believes to be a derogatory way in testimony may ask to testify in his own behalf or file a sworn statement of facts; all testimony take in closed session shall be kept secret unless released by a majority of the subcommittee.

2 PANA MEN HELD IN ROBBERY OF KEYESPORT BANK

Captured Less Than 12 Hours After Holdup—Hidden Auto Spotted From Air.

Two Pana (Ill.) men, who were arrested and charged with robbing the State Bank of Keyesport, Ill., of $4359 less than 12 hours after the holdup yesterday, were scheduled to be arraigned today before the United States Commissioner at East St. Louis.

They were Levi (Smiley) Porter, 26 years old, a punch press operator at a tractor parts manufacturing company, and Ronald Moore, 24, unemployed. Moore has signed a statement admitting his part in the robbery, Federal Bureau of Investigation agents said, and both have been identified by victims of the holdup.

Keyesport is about 55 miles east of St. Louis.

The robbery was solved by quick action of FBI agents, Illinois Highway Police and deputy sheriffs, who recovered $4284 of the stolen money buried on a farm near Mulberry Grove, Ill. Percy Wyly, agent in charge of the FBI office at Springfield, Ill., said.

Eluded Road Blocks.

The robbers, after taking the money from a teller's cash drawer in the Clinton county bank, left the scene in an old model Chevrolet coupe and headed north on the gravel Mulberry Grove-Keyesport road. They eluded road blocks hastily set up by state and county police.

However, State Police Officer Eugene Hood, flying a private plane, observed the getaway machine where it had been abandoned on the farm of Warner Porter, uncle of Levi Porter, near Mulberry Grove. It had been left at a point where it could not be seen from the highway.

About 25 federal, state and county officers converged on the farm and Warner Porter admitted, after questioning, that his nephew and Moore had left their automobile with him. He said he had driven them to their homes in Pana.

Clothing used in the holdup was found 15 yards from the abandoned machine in two large tin cans. About 30 yards from the automobile, buried under logs and leaves, the officers found the $4284 in currency.

Moore was arrested several hours later at a bar in Pana and Levi Porter was taken into custody as he reported for work on the night shift at the Oliver Corp. plant in Shelbyville, Ill. Both were taken to the Clinton county jail at Carlyle.

Warrants were issued by United States Attorney Clifford M. Raemer at East St. Louis.

It was the third time the Keyesport bank had been held up. It was robbed twice in 1931, once of $3500 and another time of $500, but in each case the robbers were quickly apprehended.

Assistant United States Attorney Edward G. Maag said yesterday's holdup was the sixth bank robbery in southern Illinois in the last 12 months. In all cases, he said, the robbers were apprehended and more than 90 per cent of the loot recovered.

E. W. Gum, president, and Miss Lorena Durham, cashier, were in the bank when the two robbers entered yesterday. She attempted to thwart the robbery by locking herself in the directors' meeting room, but one of the men drew a revolver and ordered Gum to direct Miss Durham to open the door.

The robbers then ordered Gum, Miss Durham and a customer, Dean Wade, into a washroom. They fled in the automobile, which had no license plates, after taking the money from a cash drawer.

GETS TWO YEARS IN PRISON FOR VIOLATING MANN ACT

Ilon E. Elder, bartender, living in the 3900 block of Westminster place, was sentenced to two years in prison today by United States District Judge Fred L. Wham at East St. Louis on a charge of violating the Mann Act.

Elder, a former convict, was convicted by a jury two weeks ago of taking a young married woman from St. Louis to East St. Louis for immoral purposes.

MOTHERS ARE ASKED TO MARCH ON POLIO

Dickmann Asks for Volunteers to Participate in Fund Drive.

A request for volunteers to participate in the Mothers' March on Polio Jan. 31 was made today by Postmaster Bernard F. Dickmann, general chairman of the infantile paralysis fund drive.

Mothers will solicit donations for one hour beginning at 6:30 p.m. the final day of the 1955 March of Dimes drive. Porch lights turned on or a lamp in the front window will serve again as a signal that occupants wish to contribute to the fund.

Dickmann said thousands of women were needed to join the many volunteers already enrolled. He estimated that almost 30,000 women would participate in this year's Mothers' March.

"We are counting on the women of St. Louis to answer our urgent call for help," Dickmann said. "Last year's Mothers' March certainly showed the power of women when they have an inspiring goal."

The chairman said $273,000 was collected in last year's door-to-door collection of polio funds. "We hope to do even better in 1955, a year which offers so much promise for final victory over polio," he declared. Volunteers have been asked to call CHestnut 1-1650.

Need an Electrician ? Follow the Business Directory in the POST-DISPATCH WANT ADS
For just about every business service and trade skill! See Classifications 38 to 74.

NOTE TO ADVERTISERS
Advertising in the Post-Dispatch want ads offers a quick, economical means of reaching a vast number of potential customers.
Want ads are low in cost and high in results . . . which means, you as a business man, can increase your volume of business at a negligible increase in overhead — perhaps you can reduce overhead and increase profits by means of low cost advertising in the want ads.
Over 1½ million want ads were published in the Post-Dispatch last year—evidence of results and confidence. Cost of a want ad is unbelievably low—you can run an ad for as little as a dollar a day or even less! Call our operators . . . 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. Call MAin 1-1111.

WHAT MAKES YOU THINK YOU CAN'T BUY A '55 MODEL CAR?

My name is Hayden Rollins. I have bought cars for hundreds of people over the past few years who didn't dream they could own a current model car without a big down payment or staggering monthly payments. You can own a '55 model car, with less than 100 miles today with your car as down payment and $47.92 a month. I can also personally arrange your car purchase on a 3% down payment and your payments won't start for 45 days from date of purchase. Bank financing.

Indonesian Communist Danger Discounted, Reds Fail to Win Control of Police or Army

First National Elections Expected to Be Held This Summer—Difficulties Still Lie Ahead for New Republic Having High Proportion of Illiterates.

By JOSEPH ALSOP

(Copyright, 1955.)

JAKARTA, Indonesia.

THE news from Indonesia is both negative and unspecific, but it is still important news. In brief, the Communist danger here is nothing like so serious as it has often been painted in the last year.

To be sure, Indonesian politics have a quality all their own. Everything happens slowly. Everything is indeterminate. A crisis that would tear another country apart in a week can last a couple of months here, and produce no very clear result when it is over. And all this makes analysis pretty difficult.

Yet there is little in the picture here to justify the pessimism about the Indonesian future that is so often voiced in Washington.

On the contrary, if World Communism is not flabbily permitted to take over the rest of Asia, there is every reason to feel hopeful about this remarkable new nation of 80,000,000 people, with its beautiful land, its vast untapped resources and its immense future possibilities.

Among the Indonesian people, 90 per cent of them devout Moslems, the Communists have gained no mass base except in the labor unions in the biggest towns. They are tolerated, and Communist political support is accepted by the government of Prime Minister Ali Sastro-Amidjojo; but they have not yet got their hands on the police, the army, or any other vital lever of power.

When this reporter was in Jakarta a little more than a year ago, the army seemed to be in danger. The only seriously suspect character in the present government, Defense Minister Iwa Kusumasu-Mantri was seeking to get the army under his personal control. This attempt was causing a major crisis that filled all Jakarta with rumors of violence to come.

The crisis ended with the semi-retirement of one of Indonesia's most impressive leaders, the former chief of staff of the armed forces, Gen. Simatupang, but the way was still not opened to Communist penetration of the armed forces. The factions in the army have drawn together, if anything, because of the political attempts to play one faction against another. The army remains a powerful anti-Communist force.

Meanwhile Prime Minister Ali's government, whose good faith on this point has been unfairly attacked, is now seriously preparing the first national election. Both Ali and President Soekarno are firmly pledged to holding the election this year, and it will probably come in late July or early August.

That means that the present artificial situation, in which all politics center in a parliament of arbitrarily appointed deputies, will shortly come to a welcome end. The people will have their chance to speak. There will be a chance for a more vigorous and confident attack on Indonesia's many difficult problems, among which the economic problem bulks particularly large. As the national problems begin to be solved, the Communist danger should recede still further.

There are still very great difficulties ahead, of course. One of the most unpleasing characteristics of Dutch imperialism was the extreme restriction of education. When the Indonesian republic was established, 93 per cent of the people were illiterate, and the group of men with full, modern, western education numbered no more than a few thousand.

However patriotic they may be, illiterates cannot administer one of the biggest nations of the modern world. The task of Indonesia's small group of adequately trained leaders has been back-breaking. The wonder is not that progress in Indonesia has been relatively slow. The wonder is, rather, that the nation has survived and gone forward.

These facts mean, in turn, that any judgment of this country has to be sympathetic in order to be realistic. When the beginning was so inordinately hard, a bad end cannot be predicted just because there are initial falterings. Men like Prime Minister Ali and President Soekarno should not be judged pro-Communist because their present attitude toward Indonesian Communism seems alarmingly amiable to many Americans.

Every new nation always has two traits. It is irrationally touchy and suspicious, and it needs time and more time and still more time to develop its own political forms, its own characteristic national life and its own ways of doing world business.

If these things are remembered, and Indonesia is given both time and sympathy, this country can one day become one of the great powers of the Free World. Whether the time will be allowed, directly depends on what the responsible leaders of the Free World do about the Communist advance in the rest of Asia.

FLEESON

Formosa Pact to Be First Major Foreign Policy Debate in Senate

Opinions on Extent of U.S. Commitment to Chiang Cross Party Lines—Manila Treaty to Be Cleared First.

By DORIS FLEESON

(Copyright, 1955.)

WASHINGTON.

THE extent of United States commitments to the Nationalist Chinese under the treaty of mutual defense signed Dec. 2 will be the first great foreign policy debate of the new Senate.

The debate will cross party lines and the treaty will be under heavy fire from those who think it does too much and those who fear it does not enough.

February is seen as the earliest date for debate. The treaty has been sent to the Senate with a covering letter showing that the United States, while promising protection of Formosa and the Pescadores, has reserved the right to veto a Nationalist attack on the mainland.

This has been widely interpreted as "re-leashing" Chiang Kai-shek who was "unleashed" with great fanfare by President Eisenhower in his first State of the Union message. It is substantially a return to the Truman position. It takes into account, as Truman did, the fact that this country's allies, while supporting defensive moves on Formosa, will not support a Chiang offensive.

Foreign Relations Committee Senators explain that they have had to put the Manila treaty ahead of the Nationalist China pact because a Manila pact council meeting is scheduled for Feb. 23. The Manila signatories are the United States, United Kingdom, France, Australia, New Zealand, the Philippines, Thailand and Pakistan.

This is plausible. In fact, work on the Manila treaty was begun last session. It is probably true also that Senators are hopefully awaiting the results of the visit paid by United Nations Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold to Peiping. Hammarskjold's object was to obtain the release of 11 American airmen and other U.N. prisoners.

Nothing specific has yet emerged from this mission. President Eisenhower has counseled patience and the State Department has been resolutely silent.

Senator Knowland, the Republican Senate leader, is already pronouncing the U.N. mission a failure. Adm. Arthur Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, is back from a tour of the area and again demanding a blockade of Red China.

Every straw in the wind shows that the President will avoid war as long as he can. The covering letter to the Formosa treaty is only the latest indication that he wants no Korean adventures. Because this is so, the great majority of Senators will go along with it, but there will be prolonged debate for the record.

30 Pct. in Poll Pick Nixon as Second Choice

Dewey Favored by 23 Pct. of G.O.P. if Eisenhower Steps Aside.

By GEORGE GALLUP

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 18.

A QUESTION prompted by President Eisenhower's continued silence on a second term is what man would the G.O.P. faithful like to see nominated if the President bows out. As of today, three out of every 10 Republicans (30 per cent) say their first choice is Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

Former Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York is second with 23 per cent and Harold E. Stassen, director of the Foreign Operations Agency, runs third with 20 per cent.

In making today's survey on G.O.P. candidate preferences, the Institute reporters asked each person classifying himself as a Republican this question:

"Here is a list of men who have been mentioned as possible presidential candidates in 1956 for the Republican party. Which one would you like to see nominated as the Republican candidate for President in 1956?"

If the President should not seek a second term, here is the choice today among all persons in the survey who said they were G.O.P. voters:

Nixon	30%
Dewey	23
Stassen	20
Lodge	11
Knowland	6
Bricker	6
Dirksen	4

Here is the vote of independents for their next choice after Mr. Eisenhower:

Stassen	27%
Nixon	19
Lodge	19
Dewey	18
Knowland	7
Bricker	7

Red Chinese See Hammarskjold's Visit as Working to Their Benefit

Viewed as Step Toward Recognition by U.N.—New Approach Through India for Release of Flyers Expected Shortly.

By FRANCIS LARA

Far Eastern Correspondent of Agence France-Presse.

The Chicago Daily News-Post-Dispatch Special Radio. Copyright 1955.

PEIPING.

A NEW APPROACH to Communist China for the release of the American airmen now serving heavy prison sentences after being convicted by a Peiping court on charges of spying is expected shortly through the Indian Embassy.

A number of related problems, including Chinese Communist complaints of American espionage activities, will be considered at the same time.

There are even hints that the airmen's release might be arranged once American assurance had been given that official support would be withdrawn from all guerrilla activities on the China mainland.

Officially, Peiping has not yet reacted to Dag Hammarskjold's mission. It is still too soon after his departure. The propaganda machine is expected to put out some polite rejoinder to the United Nations Secretary General within a few days inviting him to extend contacts already established.

There is jubilation, however, behind the scenes and a sudden move of apparent conciliation.

The Chinese feel they have won another big diplomatic victory. The appearance of the mission in Peiping was regarded as another step toward United Nations recognition.

Despite American refusal to treat with the Red Chinese officially at Geneva, they have emerged as one of the main signatories of the Indochina agreement. Despite American refusal to acknowledge their existence since, they have played host to the administrative boss of the world organization.

Little wonder, therefore, that the Communist Chinese seem prepared to make concessions.

In fact, judging by the terms of the joint communique issued after the bilateral talks here, which stated that further contacts will be maintained, a visit to U.N. headquarters by Chinese Premier and Foreign Minister Chou En-lai remains in the realm of possibilities.

The case of the American airmen will thus have served a triple purpose. It will have contributed toward whipping up nationalistic feeling in China, directed against the United States. This feeling is already strongly inflamed by the Formosan issue and the conviction fits in perfectly with the nation-wide drive for final destruction of the "Kuomintang traitors who are preventing the peaceful reconstruction of China."

It seeks to prove once again that although there is no shooting war in progress at present, the Americans are still indulging in hostile activities against the Chinese people and thereby against the people of Southeast Asia as a whole who are seeking to achieve unity despite "American interference."

Finally, it allows Chou to hold a trump card at a time when the United States has just completed negotiation of a mutual security pact with Formosa which is due to come up shortly for approval by the United States Senate.

The case of the convicted airmen throws the world spotlight on the question of Chinese-American relations. It gives Red China once again after Korea and Indochina the opportunity of proving before the world its claims to international status. That is one of Communist China's primary objectives.

As for the prisoners themselves, they have vanished again as sure as those fateful nights during the Korean war when their planes failed to return to their bases. They are back in an unknown prison after their brief appearance before a Peiping People's Court.

My request to see them was refused by the Chinese authorities, not unnaturally since the answer would be the same to an inquiry by reporters in any Western country. The only glimpse I had of the men was in a four-minute newsreel, now going the rounds of China, and in the formidable exhibition of "spy equipment" now on display in Peiping.

It remains to be seen whether further discussions and concessions will lead toward the release of these men.

Churchill Lets Navy Run Down In Atomic Age, Admiral Charges

British Fleet at Lowest Ebb 'in Living Memory' as Army and Air Force Are Stressed, He Charges.

By JOSEPH NEWMAN

The New York Herald Tribune-Post-Dispatch Special Radio.

LONDON, Jan. 18.

THE Churchill government has come under fire from the Royal Navy, stung by talk that it has become "obsolete" in the new atomic and hydrogen age.

Adm. Sir Louis Hamilton replied to Army and Air Force officers who regard rockets and planes as the only weapons which should be taken seriously nowadays. These include Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery and Air Marshal Sir John Slessor, former air chief of staff. They seem to be winning a contest for defense funds in which Prime Minister Churchill sits as judge.

Navy at Low Ebb.

Speaking yesterday before the Navy League, of which he is chairman, Hamilton said the Churchill Government "has allowed the Navy to run down to an ebb lower than ever before in living memory." He also accused the Government of having given "no clear indication as to what the duty and the form of the navy of the future is to be."

"Officers and men are feeling an increasing sense of frustration and the public are losing faith in what used to be regarded as our sure shield," he said, and pointed to the low figure of recruiting.

He rejected as "absolutely false and terribly dangerous" the idea that modern weapons, including the hydrogen bomb and guided missiles, have rendered obsolete conventional weapons, and particularly navies.

Conventional weapons, he argued, are more important than ever because these are most likely to be used in another major conflict. This argument was based on the assumption that none of the major powers would use atomic or hydrogen weapons because that would mean mutual suicide.

Hamilton cited the "enormous and continuing expenditure' by the Soviet Union on conventional weapons.

Atomic Role for Warships.

James Thomas, First Lord of the Admiralty, in a speech last night at a jubilee dinner of the Navy League, joined in denying that the new weapons will reduce the Navy to a minor role.

He defended warships, not as conventional weapons to be used in a "conventional" war, but as vessels which would fit into the thermonuclear type of warfare.

The British fleet, he said, will be equipped with guided missiles and other modern equipment "as soon as possible."

THREE G.O.P. SENATORS SEEK TO AMEND IMMIGRATION ACT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 (AP)—Three Republican Senators asked Congress today to open the doors of this country to immigrants from Italy, Greece and other southern European nations.

Senators Ives, New York, Santoistali, Massachusetts, and Case, New Jersey, introduced amendments to the McCarran-Walter Immigration Act.

Ives told the Senate the proposals would eliminate some injustices which were pointed out by President Eisenhower. One proposal would allow pooling of unused annual immigration quotas, now allotted to England, Germany and Scandinavian countries, for use by southern European nationals now excluded.

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare; never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Name and address must accompany every letter, but on request will not be published. Letters not exceeding 200 words will receive preference.

Thad Snow

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I want to pay my respects to a grand man and thank Post-Dispatch columnist Leonard Hall for introducing me to Thad Snow when, through his column, he persuaded me to read Thad's book, "From Missouri."

For years I had heard of this unique planter who could understand how the sharecropper, looking up, could see much that the planter, looking down, could not.

But until I read "From Missouri" I never really understood what an old sharecropper from Southeast Missouri meant when he told me, "Snow was a fair man."

He surely was when it took real courage. I and many other people will regret his passing.

DICK CLARKE.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

In the passing of the genial and dynamic Thad Snow, Missouri has lost her greatest philosopher. He will long be remembered for his stimulating and sparkling letters to the Post-Dispatch which were read throughout the nation.

They covered subjects as diverse as the nature of the mule, Mississippi floods, and the protective tariff. What he had to say about snakes in his book, "From Missouri," well illustrates his unique and kindly attitude towards man and beast:

"Most people, I believe, regard their ill feeling toward snakes as instinctive and praiseworthy. . . . I doubt if it is instinctive any more than race hatred, because I have seen groups of unspoiled small children take fine big snakes into their affections just like they do a playful kitten.

"Once when I was riding across an open field on my mare, an extra fine blue racer crossed my path. I held to the saddle horn with my right hand and swung down and picked him up with my left. He was almost six feet long and must have weighed 10 pounds. I twined his lower half around the horn of my saddle, while I held his neck in one hand and stroked his fine head with the other. He was happy and contented by the time I got to the house. . . ."

Thoreau could scarcely match such charm and naturalness.

Kirkwood. CYRIL CLEMENS.

What St. Louis Needs

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

It was certainly disgusting to read the way the politicians have been operating in City Hall concerning patronage. How much work, if any, do these committeemen and committeewomen and their relatives do? It is time we run these parasites out.

What St. Louis needs is a city manager, and Mayor Tucker is the man for the job. Civic leaders should arouse the people and start something along that line—now!

T.N.M.

A Law to Be Repealed

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

In his State of the Union message, President Eisenhower took cognizance of "inequitable" and "discriminatory" provisions of the Walter-McCarran immigration law. "These provisions," the President urged, "should be corrected in this session of Congress."

The Walter-McCarran immigration law is causing undue hardship on residents who have lived in the United States since they came here as infants. Families are being broken up, old people—sick and infirm—are being harassed and intimidated.

These harsh provisions indeed "have the effect of compelling action"—to again quote the President.

This would be a good time to urge our Washington legislators to repeal or alter the inhuman current immigration law. SOL DERMAN

Kind Words

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch

This is a little message of appreciation for some little editorials in your paper. There was the one on Sara Teasdale and the recent one on rainy gray days in St. Louis, and early last spring there was a beautiful descriptive passage about spring time "parasols."

I think these are all the products of one man's mind. His is the kind of nature we need to interpret the present living scenery and the present living drama. He makes tid-bits.

CATHERINE BROWN.

Hill or Bluff

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Your writer who described a scenic bluff near Hamburg, in St. Charles county, as a "hill" in his story of the tour of Daniel O. Boone displayed a lack of perception.

A hill is normally considered a high mound of earth with four or more sides and nothing else of significance to distinguish it.

On the other hand, the bluff in question in St. Charles county drops off sharply from the Daniel Boone trail (Route 94) and descends swiftly to meet the mighty Missouri river. From its precipice the scenic-conscious visitor (or reporter) can view three great land masses, the fertile Missouri river valley, the vast Illinois plains, and the rugged foothills of the Ozark mountains.

Not Just Figures

The 1224-page federal budget for the fiscal year 1955-56 that President Eisenhower sent to Congress Monday is mostly statistics, but interlarded among the columns of figures must be a lot of sweat and no little disappointment and possibly even some tears.

For the third time in three successive years the White House accepts an unbalanced budget. This is a hard experience in view of the G.O.P.'s 1952 campaign criticism of the Roosevelt and Truman Administrations for spending more than they took in. If the budget is not brought into balance before July 1, 1956, the Eisenhower Administration will have operated for three and a half of its four years on unbalanced budgets.

For the third time also the White House asks for a higher federal debt limit than in the Truman Administration. This is another bitter pill because the implied promise on the hustings in the last presidential campaign was that more providential and efficient administration would make it possible for the Federal Government to live within its income.

Why, after its criticism of immediately preceding Administrations, has the Eisenhower Administration found it necessary to employ deficit financing? Because it has learned the realities by being confronted with them. Sixty-five cents out of every dollar, and that is virtually two thirds of all Uncle Sam spends, goes to bulwark national security in one way or another. The military, atomic energy, mutual security, stockpiling—these take the lion's share.

Even that may not be enough. In the weeks ahead Congress will review the allotments for airpower, for the Army and the Navy, for foreign military and economic aid, and try to decide on the basis of hearings whether the White House has proposed enough. Already there are those who feel that the defense forces are not sufficiently provided for. As to this, the testimony of Gen. Ridgway, Army Chief of Staff, and others is awaited with much concern by many wondering citizens.

If the White House and the Cabinet officers deserve a vote of appreciation for their desire to bring the budget into balance, they deserve a more expressive vote for recognizing the facts of life in this tinderbox world. An adequate security program is infinitely more necessary than a balanced budget. The role of the President, a former military leader, and Secretary Wilson is to save all that can fairly be saved in the Defense Department, but without serious risk.

Some of the other aspects of the proposed federal outlays will evoke immediate criticism as unsound and unfair. The recommended slash of three quarters of the current year's appropriation for the over-all operations of TVA has already been described by Dr. Harry A. Curtis, one of the TVA's three directors, as "murder."

This part of the budget message raises in all seriousness a question as to whether the intent of the President's power advisers is not to destroy this great effort at co-ordinating power production, flood control, navigation and forestation in a single multi-state river valley.

If such is the purpose the sooner it is found out the better. The White House's TVA budget request affords an excellent occasion to elicit this basic information.

* * *

The hopeful promise of aid for hard-pressed public school districts held out in the President's State of the Union message is not fulfilled in the budget. Indeed there is not so much as one single penny proposed to help meet the shortage in schoolrooms, now estimated at 370,000 and expected to reach 720,000 by 1960.

Marquis W. Childs reports that the President's forthcoming message on education may propose a $25,000,000 fund, but that this would be so pathetically inadequate to the needs as to amount to "an insult" to education officials.

Apparently on this urgent issue Congress will need to provide its own leadership. The way was shown in the last Congress by Kentucky's then Republican Senator, John Sherman Cooper, who proposed a federal investment of $250,000,000 in public school buildings. Thirty Senators, including the chairman of the Senate Labor and Education Committee, Hill of Alabama, are jointly sponsoring a reintroduced Cooper bill in this session, with the amount doubled.

Other aspects of the Eisenhower-Humphrey budget will be discussed later. These are enough for now to make plain that it is in for substantial and necessary overhauling.

Service and Serenity

The Rev Daniel A. Lord S.J., whose funeral will be from St. Francis Xavier (College) Church Wednesday, learned just a year ago that he was incurably ill with cancer of the lung. He had gone to the hospital for a checkup and when he said he wanted to know the truth about the diagnosis, the doctors told him the facts.

A calm, sweet man, Father Lord took the irrevocable news calmly and philosophically He had been an active religious leader, author, composer, playwright and lecturer throughout a career that would have left most men breathless. He went right on with his work—lecturing, writing, traveling, seeing the numberless people who wanted to talk with him

Soon the new of his physical condition had spread over the country. Already one of the most widely known members of his order in the United States and Canada, he became the objec of more attention than ever. He was asked so many times how it felt to know that the end of life was approaching that he was moved to write out a description of his state of mind for The Catholic Digest.

This article, entitled "My Good Angel o Death," was printed last July. Now more people than ever learned about Daniel A. Lord and his serene, steady outlook on life. About half of that article appears under the cartoon on this page today. We can think of no better way to memorialize the man and priest who wrote these words than by reprinting them now.

Jenner Prefers the Discredited Way

Missouri's Senator Hennings, backed by Senator Mike Mansfield of Montana, wants the Rules Committee to give the Senate a chance to act on his proposed code for investigating committees before it becomes involved in other matters. But Senator Jenner of Indiana is opposing the code, the chief feature of which is a ban on one-man hearings.

This is not exactly a surprise since Jenner himself hoed the row in which Senator McCarthy planted so much mischief Jenner was more courteous. But so long as one Senator can summon witnesses on his sole authority and be as one-sided as he wants, there is a danger to constitutional rights.

One-man hearings can be useful. Under certain circumstances, a committee may save much time by having a single member look into some aspect of the matter under investigation. This is recognized by Senator Hennings in his proposed code for committee proceedings. But he insists that such a one-man hearing be authorized by a majority of the committee. Congressional investigators have—and should have—the power to look high and low. But it is to be doubted that their search will ever be impeded by fair play.

YES for the Transit District

Voters in St. Louis and St. Louis county will enjoy a golden opportunity next Tuesday to do something more about the transit problem than complain about it.

If they vote YES for the Metropolitan St. Louis Transit District they thereby create a tool with one purpose: To tackle the transit mess and to straighten it out in the public interest.

At the start the Transit District would have two principal powers. The first would be the power to regulate fares, routes, schedules and service. That job is now done in Jefferson City by the Missouri Public Service Commission. By transferring the task to the Transit District the people would gain home rule for mass transit in city and county.

This ought to mean more intelligent and sympathetic regulation by local people. Transit riders in St. Louis and the county support the transit systems in this metropolitan area. Surely they have a right to see that those systems are run in their interest.

The Transit District's second principal power would be to conduct a comprehensive survey of the area's mass transit needs and what to do about them. In our view, this is vital. It means that someone will be on the job searching for a way out of the vicious cycle of steadily increasing fares and steadily decreasing service. Nobody is doing that kind of a job now, and nobody is likely to do so in the future.

The Transit District enjoys one further power. Having completed its comprehensive study, it could go a step farther. If it became necessary, and if the people approved, the District could acquire or operate a mass transit system.

This is perhaps the most misunderstood area of the Transit District proposal. Many opponents, among them some important business groups in city and county, as well as political leaders in both jurisdictions, have jumped to the erroneous conclusion that a vote for the Transit District is a vote for public ownership of Public Service Co. This is not so.

A YES vote is a vote for home rule over transit regulation and for a survey of the transit mess, nothing more. After that survey, and only after it—if it seemed clear that public ownership were indicated—could that matter be referred to the people. They would have a chance to vote on it But that would be a separate and distinct matter from the question of next Tuesday.

The question to be decided Tuesday is whether the people want to do something about the transit problem. A YES vote is a vote for action A NO vote is a vote to go on drifting.

No Reform, Thank You

It is becoming clearer every day why the Democratic City Committee is so dead set against Mayor Tucker's proposal for a new City Charter.

The public payroll is loaded with these party officials and their relatives. They know a good thing when they see it. So long as they can control the overwhelming Democratic majority in the Board of Aldermen they are not going to permit any such nonsense as a new Charter.

A new Charter could mean reform in the interest of economy. Certainly it would mean the end of much patronage. Since that might cost some party officials and their relatives their soft berths, they are not buying any new Charter, thank you.

'Dumping' Quickly Resented

The Department of Agriculture did not have to wait very long for reactions to its decision to put 10,000,000 pounds of butter on the world market for whatever price it could get. New Zealand's ambassador, Sir Leslie Munro, has made a formal protest. Objections also have been heard from such other butter-exporting countries as The Netherlands and Denmark. They were to be expected.

Our most resented economic sin in the years after World War I was "dumping," the disposal of excess American production abroad at worse than cut-throat prices. Instead of favoring foreigners with bargains, this threatened their own economies. It made us no friends. Should we start this all over again?

Admittedly the Department of Agriculture is under congressional pressure to get rid of at least some of its surplus commodities. But those who would work a very slight improvement in our economy in this way should consider the cost. More than ever we need friends banded together in a firm alliance. Is a slight and passing advantage worth the risk of antagonisms?

Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz says: "We cannot expect our foreign friends to bail us out of our agricultural difficulties." As automatic factories—and perhaps the early industrial use of atomic power—raise our productivity beyond what we can consume, this will apply in other fields. The United States must give serious thought to the problems which come with ever higher outputs. The answer surely is not a reversion to "dumping."

For Expressway Action

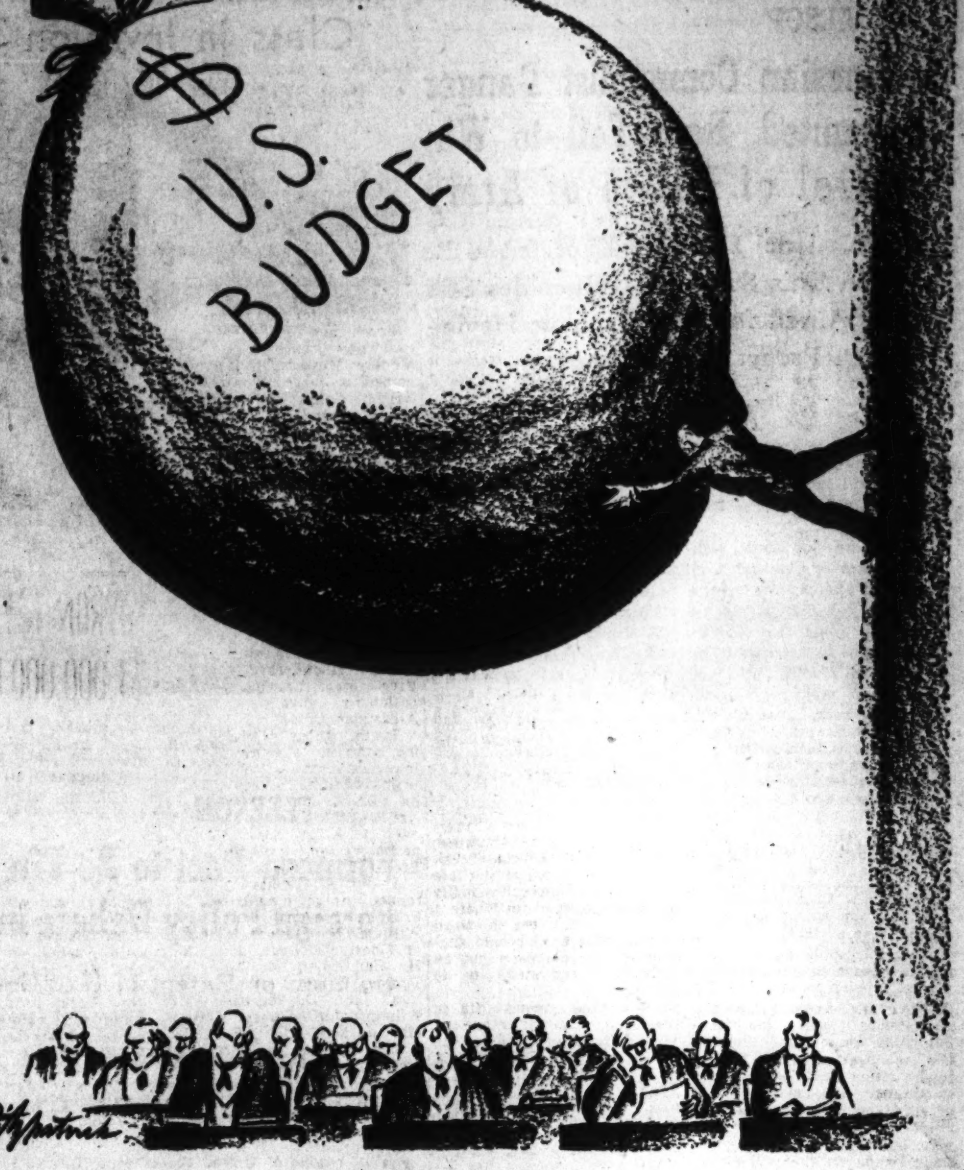
The time has come to end the debate over a route for the Mark Twain expressway. The time has come for action. An ordinance now before the Board of Aldermen, formally adopting the revised route which has been approved by the State Highway Commission, should be passed.

The state's position on this vital trafficway for northwest St. Louis seems reasonable enough. The state says it won't advance funds to construct the first section, which will link the Third street expressway with Natural Bridge avenue until the city by ordinance approves the route for the entire expressway

Briefly, this simply means that the state can not commit funds for the first leg until it is sure the rest of the route will be available for future development. After much discussion and delay, the state has accepted revisions of its original route which minimize the objections. Now it is time to firm up the route so that work can begin.

If the city meets the state's conditions—by passing the route ordinance and agreeing to pay for a connection between the expressway and Natural Bridge avenue—work could begin relatively soon on a project of great immediate value to the relief of traffic congestion.

Completion of that section of the expressway between Third and Washington and Eleventh and Branch streets would give the city a high-volume trafficway looping the downtown district all the way from Natural Bridge to Twelfth and Gravois. This would mean so much, as an interim objective pending completion of the full expressway system, that the Board of Aldermen should lose no time in adopting the necessary legislation.



HERE SHE COMES AGAIN

How a Man of Faith Viewed Death

From an Article Written for the July 1954 Issue of the Catholic Digest by the Late Rev. Daniel A. Lord S.J.

I had come to St. John's Hospital in St. Louis for my quarterly anesthetic and fulguration. I hope I have that word right: it means literally to be struck by lightning. And that is what my surgeon, Dr. Barthels, says he does when he puts his instruments deep into my bladder and with electric current hits the small but annoying growths. That has been going on for almost six years. Ask me anything about going under an anesthetic, and I can be very vivid. This time, as often before, I also had X-rays taken of my lungs.

Father Lord

I had emerged from the anesthetic, and was relaxing peacefully in bed, when Dr. Bartels entered the room. With him was one of the kindest men who ever lived, my physician, Dr. Munsch. It was clearly a committee, so when they sat down, I grinned and they smiled wryly. I asked, "News?" and they said, "Yes."

Then I started guessing. "Return of my old TB? Heart condition?" They shook their friendly heads.

"Don't tell me it's cancer," I said, half joking.

"You'd want to know the truth, wouldn't you?" they quickly asked.

How to Live With Cancer

Well, all my life, I've wanted to know the truth. I have always thought the truth, pleasant or unpleasant, is something to which people have a right; and in the end, truth is the only kind answer. So I nodded. "It's cancer," said the doctors, "cancer of the lungs."

I suppose my next question was inevitable. "How long do I live?"

"Who knows? There is no predicting with cancer. If you were a young man, your time might be short indeed. The same natural law which makes healthy tissue and cells in a young man grow fast, makes his wild tissues and cells also grow fast. At your age, 65, it may work very slowly.

"Patients show all the signs, register on the plates, come back six months later, and no cancer. We can build up, as we mean to do with you, a buttress, a containing wall of healthy cells around the wild ones; and they may hold the bad boys in check for a long time."

There was a second question: "Can I go on with my normal life and work?"

Their answer was wonderfully reassuring. "Absolutely," they said. "In fact, that is precisely the thing to do. If you come to regard yourself as an invalid, you'll hamper treatment, and speed up the disease. If you keep at your normal work, see friends, eat well, and put back that weight you've dieted off, keep cheerful and contented, you'll be a perfect patient, and we can have all possible hope. What's the schedule for the next few months?"

It was a fairly heavy one, and we discussed it. "You mustn't get yourself over-tired," they said. "You have to get decent sleep and rest and, once more, all the good food you care to eat. We'll watch, and God is good."

Back to the Routine

I write this little message of hope and confidence three months and a half after the decision. The doctors kept me in the hospital for a bit, and then turned me loose. In a sudden spurt of energy and a determination to use time to the best advantage, I found that I was itching to be at my typewriter and to write some of those books that I had long planned.

Then I hit the road, back at my routine of talks and meetings. I went out to Loretto Heights College, Denver, to keynote their Christian Humanism Conference and give the opening and closing talks. Milwaukee offered me a chance to talk to 8000 C.Y.O.ers in the big Municipal Auditorium. In Detroit, we finished up the details of Light Up the Land, a film version of our University of Detroit musical on American education.

In Toronto I worked with the local committees on "Joy for the World," which the Catholics are to present as their contribution to the Marian year. Back to the University of Notre Dame for the senior retreat, and on to Boston for the Tre Ore. Easter at the Carmel in St. Louis, and I write this as I ride back from the Kansas State Sodality Union conference in Dodge City. I am a little shortwinded; a little quicker to tire, but thus far I live with cancer and find it a gentle enough companion.

But the interest of the general public has astounded me. Cancer is big news, a great national concern, a preoccupation of the press and the general public. The St. Louis papers kindly gave my illness just the most general notice. But out-of-town papers and the news agencies wished details. How did I feel? What happened when I was told? Did I consider myself an invalid?

Outlook on Life Sharpens

Then the mail poured in. It came from kind friends and complete strangers. With the help of my infallible secretary, Marian Prendergast, I tried to answer them all. They had been kind; cancer interested or frightened them, too; and they wanted to share with me their sympathy and ask if I had anything to share with them.

Cancer actually seems to incapacitate less than most fatal diseases, and loving my life, my work, and my friends, I was grateful that I could cling normally and affectionately to all.

Almost without thinking, I told a reporter: "God knows His business, and I think He can handle this without too much worry from me." More than a hundred people have written to tell me they are glad that is so. I have felt the warmth and friendship of friends who have been kind without any thought of gratitude from me. I have known the loving and highly skilled service of the Sisters of Mercy. My doctors have given me complete confidence that, if there is a cure or a palliation, they will find it.

I cannot but feel that the dread of cancer is vastly exaggerated. People with cancer live often long and sturdily. Cancer does not necessarily withdraw a man from his normal routine. Since we all must die, God seems kindly when He sends a messenger in advance with a gentle emphatic warning.

Surely we can all use a little time to get ready for the Judgment. The realization that one has cancer sharpens one's whole outlook on life; the earth is more beautiful, the sky a little clearer, and every moment of the day precious, a thing to be hoarded.

'But I Confessed I Laughed'

May I close this inadequate statement with a little joke on myself? It was January 1954, when I was told I had cancer of the lungs. The other day, I returned to St. John's for a chest plate and the scientific lightning. Sister Mary Johnita took my plate, and said, "I wonder why the sudden interest in your lung cancer. After all, it's a secondary cancer. Why didn't someone get excited over the cancer of the bladder which you had for probably eight years?"

I gulped in astonishment. Four times a year I had returned for bladder treatment. Since I dislike amateur doctors as much as I admire professionals, I had never asked my physicians what they were treating, and since they could keep the "growths" in control, there was no point in disturbing me. But I confess I laughed.

I am glad that the nation is cancer conscious. But when I read that it is man's worst enemy, I am not so sure. I do not think God allows enemies to prevail; rather He seems to use the things we dread to draw us closer to Him.

And life seems sweetest when it melts gently in the Life that is our Eternal Promise.

Universal Shakespeare

SHAKESPEARE: OF AN AGE AND FOR ALL TIME, edited by Charles Tyler Prouty. (The Shoe String Press, 147 pgs., $2.50.)

Caviar to the general but meat and potatoes to the Bardolaters might summarize the appeal of this volume of six lectures by Davis P. Harding ("Shakespeare the Elizabethan"), Helge Kokeritz ("Shakespeare's Language"), Frank McMullan ("Producing Shakespeare"), Arleigh D. Richardson III ("The Early Historical Plays"), Eugene M. Waith ("Macbeth: Interpretation versus Adaption"), and Norman Holmes Pearson ("Antony and Cleopatra").

The lectures were given as part of the Yale Shakespeare Festival of February and March 1954, and aimed at assessing our accumulated knowledge of Shakespeare and his world, and Yale's contribution to the study of Shakespeare and the Elizabethans. Charles Tyler Prouty, editor of the volume and one of the chief planners of the Festival (as well as being one of the general editors of the revised Yale Shakespeare), contributes an introductory essay explaining how the project started, how it grew, and how—beyond all hopes or expectations—it succeeded.

Shakespeare

An avid public flocked to hear the lectures, see performances of plays (one, "The Merry Wives of Windsor," was given in the pronunciation of Shakespeare's day), and enjoy the numerous related exhibitions such as those planned by the Schools of Music, Medicine, and Law, and by the University Art Gallery.

As one record of an expertly planned and smoothly executed series of interrelated evocative events, this commemorative volume is a fine example of its kind. ALVIN R. ROLFS.

A 'How-to' Art Book

ART FOR THE FAMILY. (The Museum of Modern Art, 112 pgs., $2.95.)

If, as some people believe, the American family is disintegrating because of lack of shared interests, here is a book that will go a long way to save it. It is a "how-to-do-it" art book for the family as a group, and, like most Museum of Modern Art publications, it is a slick job with plenty of illustrations (195 photographs and diagrams). The central idea is that art is for everyone, and that it is lots of fun no matter how young or how old you may be. Written in simple language by Victor D'Amico, Frances Wilson and Moreen Maser, the text is not slanted to any particular age group expressed in years—instead it is addressed to the very young child, the older child and the adult—and describes how to make such things as collages or "feeling pictures," mobile space designs, masks to wear or hang on the wall, puppets and paintings, models of clay and papier-mache, and a home art gallery in which to display the results of the family's creative efforts.

"Art for the Family" is distributed by Simon and Schuster, New York.

Thirteen Tall Tales

THE BEST SCIENCE FICTION STORIES: 1954, edited by E. F. Bleiler and T. E. Dikty. (Frederick Fell, 316 pgs., $3.50.)

As they have for the five previous years, Bleiler and Dikty have compiled an anthology of science fiction stories that appeared during the year before. This time there are thirteen tales that range from fair to excellent. The previous anthologies have demonstrated the capabilities of the editors, and the fact that the stories for 1954 don't average as well as some of the previous collections may be attributable to the heavy competition for reprinting rights that now goes on. For anyone who hasn't the time or the inclination to cover the stories as they appear, this and the other anthologies provide a means of obtaining the best of the crop.

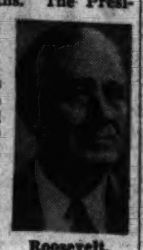
Eisenhower in an Old Guessing Game

WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON'S MOST PERSISTENT parlor game is on again full swing, as in similar periods for years back. The name of the principal character changes, but this year the question goes like this: "Will President Eisenhower run again?"

The game runs day and night. It does not matter that nobody knows, and that nobody will know for months. The President is not going to tell—if he, himself, actually knows yet. If he does not intend to run, he would not say so any time soon. Thereby he would risk loss of control of his party, and that control is precarious enough as it is. If he publicly withdrew from the 1956 race now, there would be the dog-gonedest internal fight for control of the party you ever saw.



Roosevelt.

It could well nigh destroy the party. It certainly would ruin such chances as the party has to make as good a record as possible in a Congress where it is the minority party.

A Target for Democrats.

It will need the best record it can make under adverse circumstances for its 1956 candidate, whether it be Gen. Eisenhower or someone else.

If the President, on the other hand, announced flatly in the near future that he would seek re-election, he then would identify the target—himself—exactly for the Democrats. They would then throw the book at him from now on in the effort to weaken him as the Republican candidate in 1956.

But do you think any of this stops the game of presidential roulette, or even slows it down?

It does not. Every bar room bull session, every cocktail party hubbub, every dinner party dialogue gets around sooner or later, usually sooner, to this all-engrossing mystery.

The Old Inside Low-Down.

You will get guesses now that he will, now that he won't, all uttered profoundly and backed up by what sounds like logic.

Then there is always somebody with the "deep inside low-down." He—or she—gets a respectful hearing, even though the listeners are fully aware of all the reasons set down here previously why the President can't possibly tell now what he intends to do.

This city is filled with the most gullible folks of any folks most anywhere, sophisticated though they like to think themselves. They just don't want to believe that none among them has the "inside" of any current matter.

Newspaper and radio reporters are caught up in this continual guessing game, naturally. It makes the most intriguing sort of news, even though it is not "news." They speculate among themselves and, when they get to the central figure of the mystery—that is, at presidential news conferences—then they ask him.

From every possible angle the President has been peppered and pestered with questions about his 1956 intentions at every news conference since the election. The election started it up with a zip because that was a defeat for the Republican party, running on its own without the President, and was clear evidence to Republican leaders that they would have to have the President at the head of the ticket to win in 1956.

Dunce Cap in the Corner.

At his most recent news conference the President was asked three different times in three different ways if he would be candidate for re-election. He eluded the trap every time. Obviously he was enjoying himself.

There was a grin on his face and a twinkle in his eye as he sparred with the questioners. After all, it is quite flattering to have so many people—the millions represented by reporters at the conference—so keenly interested.

The guessing will continue, the questions at news conferences will go on, that is unless, at some time or other, the President shuts them off as the late Franklin D. Roosevelt finally did the inquiries about whether he intended to seek a third term. Mr. Roosevelt would suggest that the questioner put on a dunce cap and stand in the corner.

The interest seems higher about the Eisenhower intentions than about those of either Messrs. Roosevelt or Truman. The answer seems plain.

To the Republican party it means much because there seems to be no one else but the President for 1956. To the Democrats it means much because they believe no one else could beat them.

Questions Without Answer.

It means a great deal, too, to the business interests of the country who now, for the first time in two decades, have an Administration here which they so desperately want to see continued.

It means lots, too, to all sorts of other groups in the country, some of which are for, some against, continuation of a Republican regime.

So you might as well be prepared to see the big question pop up again and again in your newspaper and over your radio and television and in learned dissertations in your magazines that will contain many words.

But not the answer.

TWO ARTISTS OPEN SHOWS IN NEW YORK

Wallace Herndon Smith, Nancy Singer Have Separate Exhibits.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18—Individual shows by two St. Louis artists, Wallace Herndon Smith and Nancy Singer, opened here yesterday. It was the fourth one-man show in New York for Smith and the first solo exhibition here for Mrs. Singer.

Smith, one of the few Americans now represented in the Modern Museum in Paris, welcomed a large crowd to the Argent Gallery on Fifty-ninth street, where his 24 canvases will be on view through Feb. 3.

None of the works in the show had been exhibited publicly in St. Louis, although a few of them were in Smith's 1953 show in Paris. At that time, the French Government purchased a Smith oil, "Snow in Clayton."

Opening Day Visitor.

Roland L. Redmond, president of the board of trustees, Metropolitan Museum of Art, was an opening-day visitor. New York critics, who have often praised Smith's "fluent, easy style," also have noted that his work occasionally suggests that of Alexander Brook.

Smith, whose realistic painting contrasts strongly with the modern abstract trend, is far from an imitator. Inasmuch as he studied under Brook at the Art Students League here, however, it is not surprising that he shows some evidence of the Brook style.

Among St. Louisans who attended the opening were: Miss Priscilla Stevens, daughter of William W. Stevens, president of Oberlin College; Mrs. John H. Heminway, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wright Pettus, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Hayward, Mrs. William Rhinelander Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Smith.

Mrs. Norman W. Halls, Mr. and Mrs. Russell E. Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. J. Wesley McAfee, Mrs. David R. Calhoun, Dr. and Mrs. Charles A. Thomas, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer.

Before setting off to open his current show, Smith remarked that he probably was sticking his neck into "an abstract noose" because of New York's apparent preference for abstract art at this time.

'I Have to Be Myself.'

Yesterday, at the exhibit, he added that many painters he knew in Paris avoided bringing their work to the United States for the same reason. He said: "I have to be myself. These are the things it has taken me a number of years to find out I want to do."

The "one-woman" exhibit of 17 paintings by Mrs. Singer was in full swing at Wellons Gallery today after yesterday's opening, attended by many of her friends and admirers. The display will close Jan. 30.

Mrs. Singer, 41-year-old wife of James W. Singer Jr., a director of Renard Linoleum & Rug Co. of St. Louis turned to art only about six years ago, for relaxation while recovering from an illness.

With the encouragement of her instructor, Miss Marie Taylor, St. Louis sculptor and artist, Mrs. Singer began entering her work in exhibitions. She has achieved wide recognition as an artist. The Singers have three children.

"Instead of relaxing, I got really excited about painting after I began," Mrs. Singer told a reporter at the opening yesterday. "But it gave me great pleasure, and I hoped it someday would give other people pleasure, too."

Semi-Abstract Technique.

Stylistically, Mrs. Singer's works are what those in the trade call semi-abstract, which means her painting have abstract tendencies but the subject matter is recognizable.

Roy Kaader, director of Wellons Gallery, said Mrs. Singer's painting style was "early Bemelmans," explaining that she achieved precisely what Ludwig Bemelmans, artist and author, "was leading up to."

"She had never seen Bemelmans," Kaader said, "but her work has the same jolly approach, the same aliveness. It's got all the excitement of Bemelmans without being imitative."

Among St. Louisans and former St. Louisans who attended the Singer opening were: Mrs. Ingram F. Boyd Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Harold Towles, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sprung, Mrs. Julius Van Raalte, Mrs. Henry Ittleson, Max Kahn, Harry Lesser, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Guiterman and Joseph Pulitzer Jr.

MYRON TAYLOR GIVES $1,000,000 TO CHURCH

Will Be Used for Episcopal Diocese Center on His Long Island Estate.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18 (AP)—Myron C. Taylor gave a million dollars to the Protestant Episcopal church yesterday.

The gift to the church's New York diocese by Taylor and his wife, Anabel, was announced by the Rt. Rev. Horace W. B. Donegan, Episcopal bishop of New York. It is to be used to build and maintain a diocesan center on six acres of Taylor's 20-acre Long Island estate. The center will include facilities for religious conferences and retreats.

Taylor an industrialist and financier, served for 10 years—both under the late President Roosevelt and former President Truman—as the President's personal representative to the Vatican.

Bishop Donegan said construction of the center, through Taylor's gift, would begin in the spring and would include a 125-seat chapel, conference rooms and sleeping accommodations for 60 persons. Eventually, the bishop said, the remaining 14 acres of Taylor's estate, along with the residence which will accommodate an additional 50 persons, is to be given to the diocese.

Daughter Born to Keenan Wynns

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 18 (UP)—Actor Keenan Wynn and his wife, the former Sharley Hudson, disclosed yesterday they had become the parents Saturday of a daughter whom they named Hilda Keenan Wynn. The Wynns were married Jan. 8, 1954, in Puerto Rico.

LOUISE HORWITZ DRAWING IN NEW YORK EXHIBITION

Louise McMahan Horwitz, St. Louis artist, will be represented by "Pieta," an expressionist black-and-white drawing, in the Audubon Artists' third annual exhibition, opening Friday at National Academy Galleries, New York.

Purpose of the show, the gallery announced, is to "present a truly comprehensive exhibition of the best contemporary work in all media, regardless of school, style or technique."

Prizes in the show, which will close Feb. 6, will include gold medal awards and several thousand dollars in cash.

Golschmann Conducts Symphony First Time From Sitting Position

He Is Pleased With Results of Test in Mississippi Concert—Musicians Join in Applause for Him.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JACKSON, Miss., Jan. 18—Vladimir Golschmann, with his left foot in a 10-pound cast, conducted his first two-hour concert here last night from a sitting position on a special podium, and when the program was over, he announced, "the first test was okay."

Golschmann, who fractured his ankle in a fall in his apartment in St. Louis on Christmas day, conducted the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra with his usual vigor, sitting on the edge of a bookkeeper's stool with his left foot resting on an elevated addition to the podium.

When Golschmann first entered the auditorium on aluminum crutches down a wider-than-usual aisle between the first and second violins, the musicians joined in the applause from the audience.

First Concert of Tour.

The orchestra, playing its first concert of a tour—the only one it will make this season—responded eagerly to the conductor's baton. Once during the Tschaikowsky Fifth Symphony, the baton flew out of Golschmann's hand, over his left shoulder and into the audience. Apparently unconcerned, he picked up a spare from his music stand and continued.

If Golschmann was uncomfortable conducting from a sitting position, he did not indicate it by fidgeting. But at intermission he said his back ached. To shorten the program time, he cut down the length of intermission and did not walk back and forth to the wings after the last number and between three encores.

The concert, sponsored by the Lyceum Association of Jackson College, a Negro teacher training school, included the "Egmont" Overture, Delius's "Walk to Paradise Gardens," Samuel Barber's "Adagio for Strings" and Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Capriccio Espagnol."

Signs Autographs.

Following the encores, Golschmann, who perspired copiously, changed his shirt and signed autographs for 15 minutes.

He arrived here by plane Sunday, but today plans to travel in one of the three tour busses. Tonight's concert will be in Mobile, Ala., and the next jump will be to Jacksonville, Fla., for Friday night. This is the first season the orchestra has played in Florida.

DR. GROSS TO DELIVER MAJOR G. SEELIG LECTURE

Dr. Robert E. Gross, professor of children's surgery at Harvard Medical School and chief of surgical service at The Children's Hospital, Boston, will deliver the sixth annual Major G. Seelig lecture at Washington University School of Medicine tomorrow at 8 p.m. in David P. Wohl Jr. Memorial Hospital auditorium, 4960 Audubon avenue.

Dr. Gross will report on "Problems in Cardiovascular Surgery." He is a pioneer in heart surgery of children. In 1941 he was first to ligate, or tie up, successfully a patent ductus arteriosus. This operation, to correct a congenital deformity in which there is an abnormal connection between the main artery from the heart and the artery to the lungs, is now commonplace surgical procedure.

A textbook by Dr. Gross, "The Surgery of Infancy and Childhood—Its Principles and Techniques," is considered a classic in the new specialty of pediatric surgery. The Seelig lectureship was established in 1948 in honor of Dr. Seelig, then professor emeritus of clinical surgery at Washington University School of Medicine.

FUNERAL SERVICES FRIDAY FOR CHARLES A. SANDUSKY

Funeral services for Charles A. Sandusky, retired Post-Dispatch proofreader, will be Friday at 9 a.m. at Resurrection of Our Lord Catholic Church, 3880 Meramec street. Burial will be in Calvary Cemetery.

Mr. Sandusky, 80 years old, died yesterday after a long illness at St. Louis City Infirmary Hospital. He joined the Post-Dispatch in 1942 and retired in 1951. He once operated a printing firm. Surviving is his wife, Mrs. Mary Sandusky, with whom he lived at 3858 Bamberger avenue.

RED CROSS GIVES GUILD BLOOD DONOR CERTIFICATE

The CIO St. Louis Newspaper Guild, Local 47, received a Red Cross certificate of appreciation last night for "outstanding cooperation" in the Red Cross blood program through its twice-a-year blood donor days.

James B. Woods of the Post-Dispatch staff, guild president, received the award from Miss Marilynn Harris, director of recruitment for the Red Cross regional office here.

Martin L. Duggan, chairman of the Globe-Democrat guild unit, is head of the union's blood donor committee.

WOMEN VOTERS PLAN VISIT TO LEGISLATURE

150 Delegates From Throughout State Going to Capital Tomorrow.

The first "go-see" trip of the Missouri League of Women Voters to the Legislature will take place tomorrow when about 150 delegates from throughout the state will visit Jefferson City. They will be hosts to senators and representatives at a luncheon at the Governor Hotel.

There will be a morning session at the hotel, with Mrs. Robert Lasch of St. Louis, vice president, as chairman. The league's program of support for equalization of educational opportunities, extension of human rights through a human rights commission and improvements in election machinery, merit system, non-partisan court plan and legislative representation will be discussed.

Speakers will include Mrs. Philip Moss, University City, as legislative chairman; Mrs. Gilbert Harris, St. Louis; Mrs. E. J. Birk, University City; Mrs. J. Russell Wilson, Webster Groves, and Mrs. John Decker, Columbia. Mrs. Moss and Mrs. Aaron Fischer, St. Louis, league president, will speak on a special radio program over Jefferson City Station KRCG.

The afternoon program will include a visit to the House session by some delegates and visits to individual senators and to a Senate committee session, if any is scheduled, by others.

CHRISTMAS EXHIBIT PHOTOS ARE ELIGIBLE FOR CONTEST

Missouri Botanical (Shaw's) Garden and the Garden Club of St. Louis are sponsoring a contest for the best pictures taken of "Christmas Around the World," it was announced today.

This was an exhibit of Christmas trees decorated in the customs of foreign lands which closed recently at Shaw's Garden and in the Shaw residence.

There will be three prizes for two classes in competition, black and white and colored pictures. Those who would enter the contest should send or bring their pictures to Shaw's Garden, 2317 Tower Grove avenue. The contest will close Saturday, Feb. 5.

Y.W.C.A. CHORUS MEETING

A meeting of a recently formed mixed choral group will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday at Wheatley branch Y.W.C.A., 2709 Locust street. Jewell Williams is director of the group, which will sing at institutions for disabled and shut-in persons. The group also has a music appreciation program.

FUNERAL TO BE THURSDAY FOR MRS. R. L. DOUGLASS

Funeral services for Mrs. R. L. Douglass, widow of Robert Lee Douglass, who was vice president of the Consolidated Coal Co., until his death in 1948, will be at 10:30 Thursday at the Webster Groves Presbyterian Church.

Mrs. Douglass, who was 80 years old, died early this morning of a circulatory ailment. She is survived by one brother, S. M. Vance of Fort Smith, Ark. Burial will be in Oak Hill Cemetery.

MRS. JOHN R. PENDLETON DIES

Mrs. Josie C. Pendleton, 5000 Waterman boulevard, died early today of cancer at the Hamilton Medical Center. She was 78 years old. Mrs. Pendleton was the widow of Dr. John R. Pendleton, who was a member of the Washington University Dental School faculty for 30 years before his retirement in 1938. He died in 1953.

Mrs. Pendleton is survived by two stepdaughters, Mrs. Clara P. Welsch, 6905 Dartmouth avenue, University City and Mrs. Bernadine P. Case of Fort Washington N.Y. and two sisters, Miss Lenore and Miss Theresa Cramer of Nashville, Tenn. Funeral services will be in Nashville.

The Salty Set.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18.

THERE was ice in the Hudson, and it was a wintry wind that snapped the burgees and house flags aloft on the Kingsbridge Armory. Parking space was a bus jump from the door. Once aboard, the visitor surveyed the armory's swarming deck and wondered aloud whether anybody in all of New York could be tending store, for it appeared that every yachtsman, yachtswoman and yachtschild on the Eastern seaboard had taken the day off to ogle the boats, finger the winches and eye the wenches on display at the National Motorboat Show.

The great hall is a sea of gleaming varnish and white canvas, a vast clutter of mahogany and teak and plywood and aluminum and steel and chrome, with as much brass as might be expected in a store that charges customers $1.50 to get inside.

At past boat shows, sex has reared its wavy blonde head among the exhibits, with mermaids and models festooning the merchandise, but the tone this year is more nautical than naughty. To be sure, one cute little bumboat was noted, very shipshape in orange pants and striped jersey, standing in the cockpit of a small launch and handing out circulars. Mostly, however, the exhibitors have avoided distractions.

$78,000 Giveaway.

THE salty set traipses through the aisles peeping through portholes, pawing, pricing, snooping. A crowd gathers to watch a man bailing water into a boat, deeming this a somewhat unorthodox procedure until it develops that the outboard motor is equipped with an automatic bailer that pumps the water out again.

Price tags are displayed with most items, from $10 boarding ladders to Diesel engines somewhat higher in price, and somewhat larger than boxcars. There are exceptions, however. Exhibitors of one 42-footer (sleeps eight, two toilets, dining nook available) show a seemly reticence about money matters, advertising merely, "see us for quotations."

No such delicacy restrains the manufacturer of a tidy little craft called a "promenade deck yacht." This offering includes "owner's stateroom, guest's stateroom, two baths, sunlighted lounging salon, convertible dinette, crew's quarters with shower, enclosed navigation bridge, teak decks, teak cockpit, electric heat" and even engine, all for $78,000.

The model on display had a television set in the living room and several soft, furry dolls seated on the back porch but these may have been optional equipment.

Gift of Tongues.

FOR economy, there's a sloop called "Dutch Treat," for Dutchmen with only $4750 to spend. There are kit boats that come even cheaper and can be put together by one backward child or three skilled cabinet makers.

There's a trifle called a "Cruisette," presumably a lady cruiser, and there's one designated as a "day cruiser," which is a way of saying, "Better not get caught out in this bucket at night; it's got no bed, stove, pantry, refrigeration or sanitary facilities."

An outboard motor carries the name, "Aquasonic." More or less literally translated, this means "noisy water." There's also something named "Aquamute," which means "speechless water," but nothing called "Minnehaha," which means "laughing water."

A thing with a torpedo-shaped stern deck and high tail fin looks like one of those cars that set speed records on the Utah salt flats. It is advertised to do "up to 55 miles per hour."

Peace in the Family.

ON the other hand, comfort rather than speed is featured in a craft displayed by the Sittin', Starin' and Rockin' Club. It is an outboard - powered catamaran fashioned of two pontoons supporting a single rocking chair, a portable radio and a rack holding a fishing rod and highball glasses.

A couple with a girl of perhaps two quit the hall and boarded the bus for the parking area. A man in the seat ahead asked the child:

"Did your father buy you a boat? He didn't? He's mean."

The yachtschild stared stonily out the window, probably brooding about parents.

Three Rookies Sign Cardinal Contracts

The count on Cardinal contracts signed stood at seven, with the club's announcement that three rookies had mailed back their papers, complete with signature. They are Luis Arroyo, a lefthander and also a sensation in the Texas League; Third Baseman Ronnie Plaza and Shortstop Bob Stephenson.

Arroyo at Houston was a big help in a late-season drive climaxed by a playoff championship. He struck out 130 in 115 innings, had an earned-run average of 2.35. He began last season at Columbus, Ga., and won eight games there, another eight with Houston.

Plaza and Stephenson both are considered excellent defense men, but at this early stage of their careers the batting lags behind the fielding. Plaza hit .260 with Allentown of the Class A Eastern League. Stephenson hit .282 with Columbus, O.

Kentucky Staggers Past LSU

NEW YORK, Jan. 18 (UP)—The upset lightning has flashed through college basketball again and today mighty Illinois and Vanderbilt are deprived of their league leads. Kentucky, the nation's No. 1 team, almost was a victim, too.

Illinois, the nation's third-ranked team in the United Press poll and tied with Minnesota for first place in the Big Ten, was blasted out of a co-leader role by a 92-80 loss to Iowa last night at Iowa City, Ia. The victory moved Iowa into that leadership tie, with idle Minnesota.

Vanderbilt, deadlocked with idle Alabama for first place in the Southeastern Conference, was handed its first league defeat of the season, 77-63, by Mississippi at Oxford, Miss. Vandy had beaten Mississippi by 25 points in a previous meeting.

But an upset to eclipse these nearly occurred at Baton Rouge, La., where Kentucky just squeezed out a 64-62 victory over Louisiana State.

Joe Fahey of L.S.U. missed a driving shot from 10 feet out with just four seconds left to play, and that was the margin of the Kentucky victory. Kentucky, apparently still suffering a hangover from its upset by Georgia Tech a week-and-a-half ago, went stone cold in the second half after taking a 39-32 halftime margin.

Meanwhile, L.S.U. hit on 45.1 percent of its shots in the second half in a stubborn but vain effort to catch up. Phil Grawemeyer of Kentucky and Roger Sigler of L.S.U. tied for scoring honors at 18 points.

Illinois apparently had Iowa whipped, holding a 47-35 halftime lead and boosting the margin to 16 points early in the second half. But then Iowa, ranked No. 12 in the U.P. Pool, displayed its prowess in a brilliant drive that finally gave the Hawkeyes the lead at 70-69. Iowa not only never was headed after that, but pulled out to win comfortably as Bill Logan led the attack with 19 points. However, little Bill Ridley of the Illini took individual scoring honors with 32 points.

Vanderbilt found fouling its fatal weakness in losing to Mississippi. The Commodores matched the Old Miss total of 18 baskets, but Old Miss made 41 of 50 free throws. Denver Brackeen, who missed the first game because he was ill, led Mississippi with 30 points. Ole Miss led almost all the way, holding a 40-26 halftime bulge.

Colorado moved into a tie with idle Missouri (each with 3-0 records) for first place in the Big Seven by beating Oklahoma, 91-82, at Boulder, Colo. Center Buddy Haldorson paced the Buffaloes by setting a new court record with 31 points. Oklahoma pressed Colorado closely through the first half, but the Buffaloes maintained a steady lead and won comfortably.

In other leading games last night: All-America Don Schlundt tallied 36 points, including the key baskets, to lead Indiana to an 88-79 victory over Michigan State, and Harold Grant's 26 points led Northwestern to an overtime 93-88 victory over Purdue in the Big Ten.

Bill Brainard's free throw with 11 seconds left gave Kansas a 73-72 victory over Iowa State in the Big Seven; Georgia Tech, which had lost three straight games since beating Kentucky, got back on the winning path, 90-71, against Mississippi State in the Southeastern Conference; Wisconsin stalled through the last two minutes for a 57-53 victory over Butler; William and Mary hit 41 of 52 free throws to beat Virginia Tech, 75-69, in the Southern Conference; and Miami (Fla.) routed Tampa, 103-76.

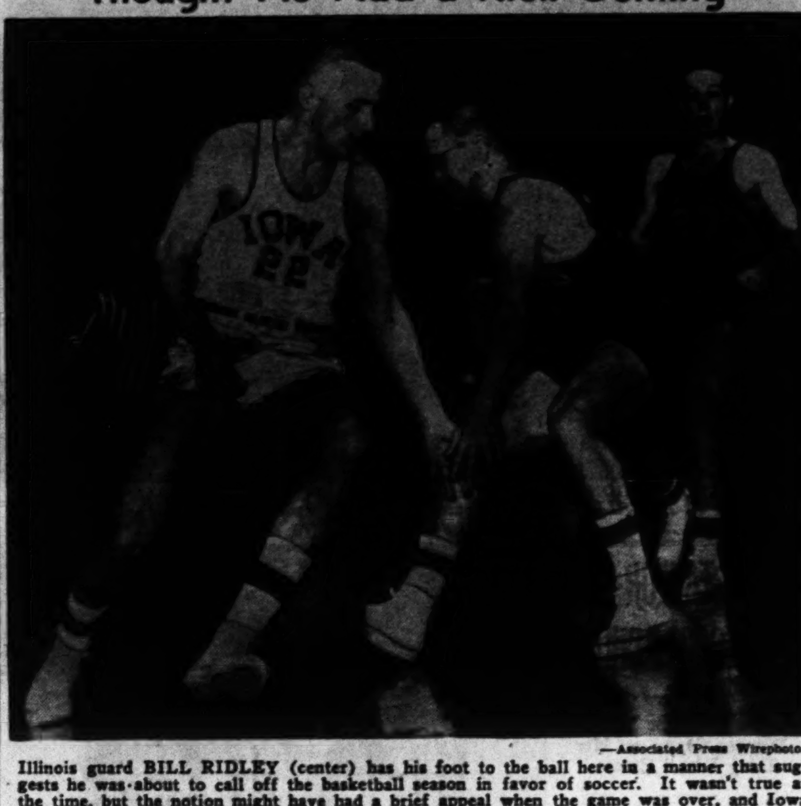
Thought He Had a Kick Coming



—Associated Press Wirephoto.

Illinois guard BILL RIDLEY (center) has his foot to the ball here in a manner that suggests he was about to call off the basketball season in favor of soccer. It wasn't true at the time, but the notion might have had a brief appeal when the game was over, and Iowa was a 92-80 victor by the ever-popular upset method. BILL SEABERG is the Iowa player confronting Ridley and the Illinois man at the right is BILL ALTENBERGER.

New Army Discharge Policy May Allow Soldier Mizell Earlier Muster With Cards

The Cardinals may have an added starter on their pitching staff much earlier than expected as a result of a proposed speed-up in discharging draftees. Vinegar Bend Mizell is the man who is likely to be available for at least the last half of the 1955 season.

Mizell, who began two years of Army duty Oct. 5, 1953, wasn't being counted on until the home stretch of next season. However, the Army has announced that many draftees will get out after 22 months, some even earlier.

In answer to a question at the Traffic Club's annual baseball luncheon yesterday at the Jefferson Hotel, Cardinal Vice President Bill Walsingham said that as far as Mizell's date of discharge is concerned, "all I know about it is what I read in the papers."

However, Walsingham said the star lefthander might be out by July 5, because the Army has been letting out draftees even before serving 22 months, if the soldier can show that he has a job waiting for him.

"He'll have a job, all right," Walsingham said, laughing.

That's Our Boy.

An officer at the recruiting office here said that for the past year or so draftees have been discharged before their 24-month tour was up if they had jobs to go to, especially seasonal jobs (like baseball).

Then, too, if Mizell saves his furlough time, he can get out of service that much earlier, rejoin the Cardinals, then slip back to camp (Camp McPherson, Ga.) just long enough to pick up his discharge.

Joe Garagiola, the catcher turned broadcaster, was the guest speaker of the program arranged by Ed Mickelson Sr., whose son was a batting sensation in the Texas League last season.

Commenting on the annual player-signings, Joe said, "When you go in to talk about signing, you're the lousiest ballplayer there is. The next day, they announce they're gonna win the pennant because they signed you."

Rookie Rave Notices.

Answering another question, Walter Shannon, director of the Cardinals' farm personnel, described new third-baseman Ken Boyer as "an outstanding defensive ballplayer, has a great arm, is real big, real fast, hit well in the Texas, Western, Pony leagues."

Catcher Del Rice said he believed Pitcher Vic Raschi would help in spots.

Replied former fellow-catcher Garagiola: "If he doesn't help in spots, we'll all be grooming the horses. All a sixth-place finish gets you is a job in the stables. Or would you rather lick labels?"—N. R.

Moore Is Ready to Fight Nino Valdes 'Winner-Take-All'

BOSTON, Jan. 18, (AP).

APPARENTLY getting nowhere with his challenges to Heavyweight Champion Rocky Marciano, Lightheavyweight King Archie Moore switched today to Nino Valdes, the No. 1 heavyweight contender from Cuba.

"I'll fight Valdes winner-take-all," said Archie. "If he doesn't want that, I'll let him take the major share of the purse. I beat him in St. Louis in 1953 and if he thinks he's entitled to a title shot, how about me? I beat him, didn't I?"

Moore was here to referee at a fight card for the benefit of the widow of Ed Sanders, the Olympic heavyweight champion who died after being knocked out here Dec. 11.

Furgol on U.S. Team in Match With Canadians

LA JOLLA, Calif., Jan. 18 (AP)—Leading golf professionals of the United States and Canada begin play here today in the fourth annual international matches for the John Jay Hopkins trophy team matches—held in this country for the first time.

Singles matches will start in this order (United States representatives listed first): Ed Furgol, United States National Open champion vs. Al Balding; Chick Harbert, United States team captain, vs. Pat Fletcher, Canadian open champion; Jack Burke Jr. vs. Stan Leonard, Canadian team captain; Cary Middlecoff vs. Bill Kerr; Marty Furgol vs. Henry Martell; Jerry Barber vs. Jules Huot.

The United States is defending champion, having won in all three previous matches.

Lloyd Mangrum, United States, and Gordon Brydson, Canada, were excluded from today's play, but both will replace one of the above on each team for tomorrow's three double matches. The Wednesday drawings will be made at the end of today's play.

The singles matches will be scored on the Nassau system of one point for each nine holes and a third for the 18-holes winner.

In addition to the trophy, which had been the only performance award, as each player gets $750 and traveling and living expenses—win, lose or draw, the 14 pros will try for cash bonuses.

Anyone breaking Gene Littler's course record of 9-under-par 63 will get $500, as will anyone scoring a hole in one. There will be $100 prize for eagles on par four holes, $25 for eagles on par fives, and $25 to anyone who birdies the tough eighteenth hole.

The Hopkins matches will serve as a tuneup for some of the players for the $15,000 San Diego Open golf tournament starting Thursday at the nearby Mission Valley Country Club.

Cape Girardeau Takes Lead in MIAA Race

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo., Jan. 18 (AP)—Cape Girardeau's Indians, with a 44-point second half, defeated Kirksville last night, 81-68, to take over sole possession of first place in the MIAA conference race.

The victory left Cape with a 4-0 conference record and gave them their sixth straight win. Kirksville has a 3-1 league slate.

Dick Eickhorst had 17 points for the Indians while Jack Beck pumped in 20 points for Kirksville.

Inquiry Finds Maryland Broke Rules in Recruiting Athletes

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 18 (UP)—The University of Maryland, which had the nation's top-ranked football team in 1953, was criticized yesterday for "over-emphasis on football" and alleged rules violations in recruiting athletes.

The criticisms were made by the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools in an evaluation report presented to the Maryland General Assembly.

The association ruled that Maryland violated rules of both the National Collegiate Athletic Association and the Atlantic Coast Conference in recruiting athletes. It said it had not determined "how widespread these violations have been, but some well - documented evidence exists."

Officials of the N.C.A.A. refused to disclose whether that organization also has been investigating Maryland athletics and whether it planned any action in the matter.

At Des Moines, Ia., Frank Gardner of Drake University, chairman of the N.C.A.A.'s Committee on Rules Violations, declined to say whether or not his group has been studying Maryland. He said the committee merely gathers information and passes it to the N.C.A.A. Council, from which any announcement would have to come.

In Kansas City, Walter Byers, executive - secretary of the N.C.A.A., also declined comment.

Jim Tatum, head football coach and athletic director at Maryland, said, "As far as I know, we haven't been asked to change anything that I could change as athletic director."

Tatum said he had no additional information about the charge of rules violations.

The report of the association did not specify any instances of recruiting violations. But it criticized an "imbalance" in the number of athletic scholarships," finding that "football players constituted 18 per cent of the scholarship recipients, but got 54 per cent of the available scholarship money." It said there was a tendency to favor athletes for softer jobs on the campus.

The association also criticized "interlocking" relationships between members of the athletic board, the council on intercollegiate athletics and other important committees of the university.

Patterson Stops Grant, to Meet Rex Layne Next

NEW YORK, Jan. 18 (UP)—Floyd Patterson, Brooklyn's remarkable young lightheavyweight contender who stopped Don Grant in the fifth round, indicated today he would bypass a sure shot at the 175-pound title this year and challenge for the heavyweight crown in 1956.

Patterson and manager Custer d'Amato agreed today to fight heavyweight Rex Layne of Salt Lake City at Brooklyn's Eastern Parkway arena, Feb. 14 or 21, if matchmaker Teddy Brenner could close the deal. Brenner said "I'll have no trouble."

Floyd's weight was only 168 pounds last night when he scored a technical knockout over Grant of Los Angeles, 166¾, at 1:15 of the fifth round at the Parkway.

But Floyd, former Olympic middleweight champion, said he would register about 175 for Layne, who is a 200-pounder. "I'm growing and I'll be a full-fledged heavyweight by the end of the year," added the lightning-fast 20-year-old Negro who had been slated for his first 10-round bout last night. Although he is the fourth-ranking contender, his age had prevented accepting more than eight rounds previously.

Patterson was extremely impressive last night as he registered his second fifth-round knockout in 10 days by tagging 21-year-old Grant with the first kayo of his career. He gave the speedy and willing young California Negro such a lop-sided battering that none of the three ring officials voted Grant a single round before the bout was stopped.

A left hook to the lower ribs drove Grant to one knee in the fifth. He was up at "four" and took the mandatory count of "eight." But as the groggy Don attempted to resume the fight, his handlers rushed up the ring steps in his corner and were about to climb into the ring to stop the bout when Referee Barney Felix halted it and awarded Patterson his twentieth victory and twelfth kalo in 21 professional fights. It was Grant's second defeat in his 18. Patterson was a 1-3 favorite.

Their bout was widely televised. Also televised was the fight at St. Nicholas arena, where middleweight Milo Savage of Salt Lake City—a substitute—floored Moses Ward of Detroit twice while winning a unanimous, upset 10-round decision.

Savage, an 8-5 second choice, weighed 159¾ pounds to 161 for Ward, who was dropped by right hands to the chin in the second and sixth rounds. The second-round trip was through the ropes and out onto the ring apron for a count that just missed ten.

Star Casters To Compete in Meet at Arena

By Harold Flachsbart

They'll turn the outdoors indoors tonight at The Arena as outdoorsmen visit the Midwest Sports, Vacation and Boat Show. Doors will open at 7 o'clock, the next five days at 2 p.m.

Large exhibits are promised from commercial and conservation groups and the big feature, say Arena officials, will be public trout fishing in which the deal is, "You catch 'em, We clean 'em, and you keep 'em." These rainbow trout will weigh from one-half pound to seven pounds.

As usual, with sport shows, there will be a floor show and, as usual, Monte Blue, former cowboy movie star and more recently a television performer, will be the master of ceremonies.

As is the case in all sport shows, fishing tackle, guns, and all gimmicks and gadgets will be on display for the people who like to fish and hunt or just go out and have a good time. Even a $75,000 Cadillac will be exhibited.

Three St. Louis casting clubs will compete in a registered fly and bait casting tournament, and several nationally prominent men like Bill Lovely, Charles Schall, Leonard Williams, Clem Forcade and Harold Smith will compete.

In the floor show portion of the Arena show, Hank Hansen will slide down a narrow reed run-way in a ski act that will wind up with a forward somersault near the finish of the 75-foot slide.

Ellen Weed and her 17-year-old son will demonstrate the handling of wild animals, including a skunk, possum, red fox, white-tailed deer and raccoon.

Nova Scotia guides are scheduled for log rolling, wood chopping and the full treatment of such things. Bud Carlell and Rose will throw boomerangs and Cherry Haushaulter's Golden Retrievers will be a feature.

Floor shows are scheduled at 4:30 and 9 o'clock daily.

Missouri May Soon Liberalize Its Season On Deer Hunting

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Jan. 13 (UP)—A State Conservation Commission official predicted the day may soon arrive when Missour will liberalize deer hunting seasons and regulations.

M. O. Steen, chief of the Fish and Game section of the Commission, said it would not be the range capacity of the state that would limit the size of the deer herd.

"It will be the 'maximum tolerance' by agriculture that will set the limits," Steen said.

Steen said deer were already causing trouble in some parts of the state.

Nieman 26th in White Sox Fold

NEW YORK, Jan. 18 (UP)—The Chicago White Sox, first big league club to sign all their players in 1953 and 1954, are well on their way toward doing it again in 1955.

Outfielder Bob Nieman became the twenty-sixth member of the White Sox to sign Tuesday, leaving only 15 players who haven't as yet agreed to terms. General Manager Frank Lane prides himself in getting all his players under contract quickly so it is quite likely he'll have the 15 others in tow before the end of the month.

Nieman, acquired in a trade with Detroit two months ago along with Walt Dropo and Ted Gray, batted .263 in 91 games last year.

Elsewhere in the majors, switch-hitting Junior Gilliam of the Dodgers signed his contract after receiving a slight raise. Gilliam batted .282 in 146 games last year.

Jackie Robinson, the Dodgers veteran infielder, says the current season may be his last in baseball if he is bothered by injuries as much as last season. . . Pitcher Harry Byrd has signed with Baltimore.

New Diamonds At Riverview For Baseball

Keeping pace with the rapid growth of sports teams in the north St. Louis County area, the Riverview School District Athletic Association has purchased a tract of eight and one-half acres for a park and playgrounds. The committee announcement, made by Chairman Bob Russell, said two baseball diamonds will be ready for the "Mothers Day" opening of the baseball season, May 7.

The play field is on Chambers road, one block east of Bellefontaine road, directly across the street from Riverview High School.

Funds used for the purchase of the ground and erection of improvements are raised by donations, promotions and solicitations. Included in this program is a dance at Painters Hall, 2715 N. Union blvd., on Feb. 12.

The Riverview school district takes in the following communities: Bellecrest, Bellefontaine Neighbors, Bissell Hills, Dellwood, Glasgow Village, Hathaway Hills, Hathaway Meadows, Moline, Oakborough and Riverview.

Russell called attention to the fact that the area last season had 16 baseball teams, 14 soccer teams and other sports groups in competition. Plans call for facilities for baseball, soccer, badminton, horseshoes and a picnic area.

The sponsoring Riverview athletic association has a membership of 88 men who have devoted their time to managing, coaching, umpiring and organizing sports teams on a voluntary basis.

Brentwood and U. City Play Feature Game

Brentwood,. a team that may make its move at any time, will match 2-and-1 records with University City on the U. City court in a feature of tonight's Suburban League basketball action.

Maplewood, the only undefeated team with its 3-0 mark, will visit ambitious Ladue (2-1). Other games are: Clayton (1-2) at Webster Groves (2-1), Ritenour (0-3) at St. Charles (1-2), Kirkwood (2-1) at Ferguson (1-2), and Normandy (1-2) at Wellston (1-2).

U. City and Brentwood were regarded as pre-season favorites in the Suburban circuit, though Brentwood has lost five of its 11 games. The Eagles are playing under their third coach in as many seasons in John Lauer, however, and this may be a factor in their slow start.

Coach Lloyd Brewen's Indians defeated Clayton and Ladue in league games, but were surprised by Normandy a week ago, 46-40. U. City's overall record is 8 and 2.

In the Suburban individual scoring standings, Ellis Minton of Kirkwood is ahead with his point-a-minute total of 66 points in three 32-minute games. John Jones of Wellston is second with 61.

	Games	Pts.
Ellis Minton, Kirkwood	3	66
John Jones, Wellston	3	61

Bayless Defeated by Troy at Louisiana

Bayless, looking more like the top Class B school in the district, came off second best in its first brush with Troy, the team the Broncos may face again in the regional final at St. Clair. Troy won the game, 77-69, for first place in the Louisiana tournament.

In early rounds, Bayless won from Jennings, 57-51, and from Eureka, 71-67, while Troy advanced at Mehlville's expense, 74-58, and nosed out host Louisiana, 65-61, in the semifinals.

Sonny Siebert, Bayless ace, picked up 94 points in three games. He scored 30 against Jennings, 43 against Eureka and 21 against Troy. The 43 points constituted a tournament record, while it also was a new school mark for a Bayless athlete.

Siebert, who has tallied 416 points this season, now has 1231 for his prep career.

Bowdry Catches Fancy of Fans in Gloves Tourney Victory

42 of First Bouts End In Kayoes

By W. J. McGoogan

Jesse Bowdry, a middleweight from the Rock A.C., is causing more comment than any other boxer in the twentieth annual Golden Gloves tournament at Kiel Auditorium. He is looked on as a "natural."

After advancing through the first round with a decision over tough Palmer Hubbard, of Vashon, Bowdry will be called on to face Chester Everly of Centralia, Ill., in the second round.

That is not the real scrap which Gloves fans are waiting for, however. They want to see Bowdry fight Willie Anderson of Tandy Center, who, they think, will give Jesse a whale of a battle.

The first night of the tournament, sponsored by the Globe-Democrat, resulted in three knockouts, 39 technical knockouts, 21 defaults and the rest decisions in the 166-bout program.

Attendance was announced as 5363, with receipts of $1,730.50 as against an attendance of 6369 and receipts of $1,904.10 last year.

Anderson to Box Russell.

And the second round consists of 139 contests with Anderson meeting Bill Russell of Fort Leonard Wood in the feature bout in the middleweight division, in addition to the one in which Bowdry will appear.

Then there is a contest in the lightweight class between Antonio Martinez of the Boys' Club and Aaron Cole Jr. of Carr Recreation.

Martinez won a decision from Willie Jenkins of Scott Air Base in three hard-fought rounds. He appeared to be in fine condition, which always means a lot in any boxing contest.

In the same class, Donald Owens, Fort Leonard Wood, defeated Willie Manus, Carr Center, in the third round.

Silvers Stops Davis.

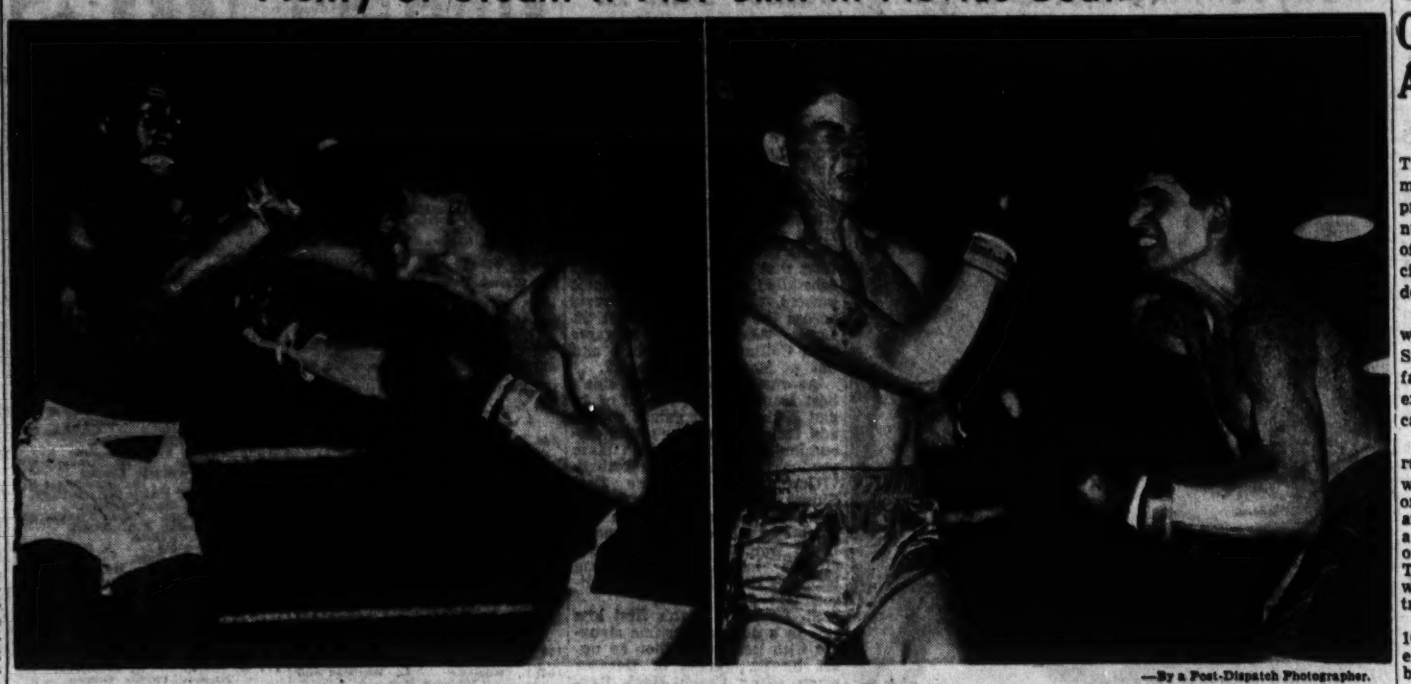
Kenneth Silvers, St. Paul Social Center, scored a sensational technical knockout over Percy Davis, Tandy Center, in the first round. Silvers opened the fight with a punch that put Davis on the floor for a count of nine. They had hardly resumed fighting when Silvers knocked Davis down again and the referee mercifully stopped the contest.

In a light heavyweight Open contest, Dave Coulter of Quincy, Ill., won from Robert Cox of St. Paul Social Center in another hard-fought event.

Amateur heavyweight bouts usually are unimpressive and the contest which Robert Johnson of Neighborhood Association won from Frank Cisco of Gamble Center was no exception.

On the second night's card, Charles Vaughn of Wendell Pruitt Homes meets Ben Marshall of Quincy, Ill., while Russell Brown of Jefferson City takes on Lucius Tate of Fort Leonard Wood.

Plenty of Steam if Not Skill in Novice Bouts



—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

These boys may never be champions, professional that is, but they certainly are giving their all in their fights on the opening program of the annual Golden Gloves tournament at Kiel Auditorium. In the first picture, BILL CAMPBELL (left) of Sherman Recreation Center, and FRED JOHNSON of Mullanphy, are swinging at each other in the 126-pound novice class. Campbell won on a decision. Flinching before he is hit is BOBBIE BIRDSONE (left), Douglas Athletic Club, in a 135-pound novice contest with CHARLEY LOMBARDO, Bosco Boys' Club. Birdsone was the victor on points.

'Bowl for Blood' Event Prizes Withdrawn by Junior C. of C.; 5000 Expected but 153 Compete

By John J. Archibald

The "Bowl for Blood" tournament, co-sponsored this year by the Junior Chamber of Commerce and the Bowling Proprietors' Association, has been called off, the Post-Dispatch learned today. Letters were sent out recently to each of the 153 persons who donated a pint of blood to the Red Cross and bowled in the tournament, and a number of entrants have complained to managers of alleys in which they competed. An automobile was one of the announced prizes.

"We felt that the small number of entrants did not justify the awards that were described on our posters," said Len Scott, president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce. "Giving such prizes as an automobile and a group of expensive appliances to the winners in such a small group would be ridiculous."

"We did not cancel the tournament," Scott continued, "but we did withdraw the prizes."

This was the second time that the Bowl for Blood event was held. Last year it was at Bevo Lanes, where 670 persons competed after donating blood and paying a $1.50 fee to cover bowling expenses."

"The 40 member houses of the Bowling Proprietors' Association would not co-operate with us," said Scott, "because the Bevo Lanes is not a member of their group. They refused to put tournament posters in their establishments, but told us that if we held the meet in B.P.A. alleys this year, they would help us."

"Both at that time and again this fall," said Scott, "the B.P.A. officials told us that they would secure at least 5000 entries with their 40 houses, if one non-member alley could raise 670 last year."

"Instead, we get 153," Scott said. "Champions were supposed to be determined at each house, but several alleys submitted only one entrant each. As far as we know, no special effort was made to encourage bowlers to donate blood to the Red Cross and enter the tournament. At many houses, our posters were not put up."

Vic Quarternik, secretary of the B.P.A., said that his group still hopes to persuade the Jaycees to go through with the tournament.

"No matter whose fault it was that the tournament failed," Quarternik said, "you must give the prizes that you advertise. Those people who paid their $1.50 entry fee and gave the blood have a right to compete for the awards, regardless of how few entrants they are."

The American Bowling Congress had sanctioned the tournament, and there are A.B.C. rules barring the cancellation of such an event because of a small entry. Bill Gray, the A.B.C. representative for St. Louis, said he had no statement to make at this time.

Gray would neither confirm nor deny that the A.B.C. national headquarters is investigating the matter.

Saddler Stops Perez in Fourth

BOSTON, Jan. 18 (AP)—Featherweight Champion Sandy Saddler of New York tuned up for his Feb. 25 title defense against Teddy (Red Top) Davis by knocking out Lulu Perez in 1:34 of the fourth round of a scheduled non-title 10-rounder last night in Boston Garden.

Saddler, who came in a pound over the contracted weight, scaled 131 to 127¼ for the 22-year-old from Brooklyn.

It was the ninety-eighth knockout for Saddler in his long and spectacular ring career. The 28-year-old veteran started slowly, but then showed his old-time punching power as he set up Perez with a thundering left hook to the head early in the fourth round.

Lulu sagged back against the ropes with Saddler right on top of him, flailing away with both hands. Sandy got in at least a dozen punches in a two-fisted barrage as Perez—braced against the ropes—slowly sank back on his haunches. Perez got up just as Referee Tommy Rawson ended the 10-count.

St. Mary's, McBride Win.

St. Mary's High School defeated Laboure, 2-0 and McBride won from DuBourg, 6-0, in high school soccer matches. Rich Mueth and Tom Ahrens scored for St. Mary's. Don and Larry Thiema, brothers, each tallied twice for McBride, while Gary Foppe and Jack Krebs tallied the other goals.

FIGHT RESULTS

BOSTON—Sandy Saddler, 131, New York, knocked out Lulu Perez, 127¼, New York (4). Non-title.

BROOKLYN (Eastern Parkway)—Floyd Patterson, 168, Brooklyn, stopped Don Grant, 168½, Los Angeles, (5).

NEW YORK (St. Nicholas Arena)—Milo Savage, 159½, Salt Lake City, outpointed Moses Ward, 161, Detroit. (10).

PARIS, France—Charles Humez, France, knocked out Hans Stretz, Germany, (9).

TORONTO, Ont.—Earl Walls, 197½, Toronto, outpointed Jimmy Slade, 179½, New York, (10.)

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Izzie Angelo, 148, Providence, outpointed Rocky Sullivan, 139½, Boston, (8.)

BUTTE, Mont.—Kenny Davis, 120, Los Angeles, outpointed Ralph Capone, 130, Chicago, (10.)

DENVER—Joe Maldonado, 131, Denver, outpointed Russ Tarus, 127½, Davenport, Ia. (8.)

Bills JV Plays Benefit Today for Hall of Fame

A benefit game for the National Basketball Hall of Fame will be played this afternoon at the St. Louis University gymnasium, between the Billiken junior varsity and Lindsey Wilson Junior College of Columbia, Ky. Game-time is 4 o'clock.

Celtic Smoothies Give Eastern All-Stars Edge

NEW YORK, Jan. 18 (UP)—The finest artisans in the basket-making industry shoot for a "net profit" tonight in the fifth annual East-West All-Star game of the National Basketball Association at Madison Square Garden.

The East squad, which has won three of the past four All-Star games, was a three-point favorite for the classic which is expected to draw close to a capacity crowd of 18,000.

Because of the new 24-second rule for professional basketball which requires players to pass or shoot the ball within that time after they receive it, there was a chance that a new scoring record would be set for the game. The previous high was in 1951 when the East swept to a 111-94 triumph over the West.

Each team will be manned by 10 stars, selected by sports writers and broadcasters, and all but one of the East squad were on the team last year. The only new Easterner is Paul Arizin of the Philadelphia Warriors, who returned this season after two years in military service and has run up an average of 20.4 points per game. However, Arizin played on the All-Stars before going into the service.

The East will be bulwarked by Boston's three Celtic smoothies, Bob Cousy, easy Ed Macauley, and Bill Sharman.

There will be four newcomers on the West squad including Milwaukee's two brilliant rookies, Frank Selvy and Bob Pettit, both averaging 20.8 points per game. The other 1958 newcomers are Vern Mikkelsen of Minneapolis and George Yardley of Fort Wayne.

Veteran Charley Riley Coaches Glovers on How to Chill 'Em

By Neal Russo

Charley Riley, always a busy man in the ring with the gloves, now is just as busy bare-fisted. Sidelined—perhaps permanently—because of a bad left eye since his knockout loss to Jimmy Carter, Riley took 22 boys into the Golden Gloves tournament from the Wendell Pruitt Homes A. C. He and Jim Richie, another outstanding former professional, are coaching the new club.

Bob Foxworth, once a very promising light-heavyweight, is considering a comeback, but many of his friends are hoping the East St. Louis flash changes his mind. Foxworth, now 30 years old, suffered a detached retina in his last professional bout several years ago. Doctors have pronounced the eye sound, but some observers fear permanent damage may result if the eye is injured again.

Injured Liston Attends.

Still another professional on the injured list who was on hand for the first night's action was Sonny Liston, heavyweight whose jaw was broken in a split-decision loss (his first defeat as a pro) to Marty Marshall of Detroit. Marshall went on to knock out Bob Satterfield in the first round. Liston, who won the national Gloves championship after gaining a title here last year, expects to fight again in a month or two.

Little Joe Weber, who put in 28 years as coach of the South Broadway A.C., came "out of retirement" after 13 months and served as a second. Weber, who turned out many champions after his own career as an amateur and professional, was on the sick list.

A member of the "I never miss the Golden Gloves Club," is Frank Crespi, former Cardinal infielder who has been a tryout camp director and scout for the Redbirds the last four years. Golf still is "Creepy's" big hobby. After a month's layoff, Frank reported, he shot a 93 one day, a 72 the next and a 94 the last weekend at Forest Park. "If I don't get my game straightened out, I won't even enter the baseball players' tournament in Florida next month," said Crespi, who has been a regular entrant.

Six Under Myles's Wing.

Ted (Pop) Myles, the long-time trainer (28 years) at the St. Paul Social Center, bemoaned the closing of the training center because of lack of finances. Usually loaded with Gloves prospects, Myles had only six this year. They trained at Tony Anderson's gym on Olive street.

Ray Palmer, a fixture for many years as a referee, watched from outside the rings. He has been ill.

Disappointment department: Elmer Vail, 135-pound subnovice, worked out five days a week since October, but was out with tonsilitis when Coach Vic Windle of Sherman Center stopped by to pick him up.

Coach Alonzo Karr of the Centralia, Ill., squad missed two of his top hands: Vern Sanders, recovering from injuries in a motorcycle accident, and Jim Talley, who has a broken hand.

Gene Cartes of Cherokee Center, who defeated Otis Bolden of Carr, in the eighth bout, had to default when he was called on to fight a second time the first night. Drs. Harry Klein and Harold Freedman discovered collodion on a cut over his eye and two stitches were required. Cartes was to have fought Lester Bausch of Maplewood Moose in the 135-pound novice division.

District Golf Meeting Tonight at Glen Echo

The St. Louis District Golf Association will hold its annual dinner meeting tonight at Glen Echo Country Club.

Herb Graffis, editor of the Golfdom aand Golfing magazines published in Chicago, is scheduled to be the featured speaker.

Election of officers and arrangement of the 1955 district schedule will be among the business matters before the meeting, to be attended by representatives of country clubs and golf courses in the area.

Soells Meet A.F.C. In Muny Basketball

Bob Soells (6-2) have a one-game lead over Meramec Caverns (5-3) going into tonight's final games on the regular schedule of the Muny basketball league at Sherman Park.

The Soells play A.F.C. Alumni (1-7) at 7:30 o'clock, then the Caverns oppose Bruce Campbells (4-4).

In the Y.M.C.A. league finals on the other court at Sherman, champion Wagner meets Nooter after runner-up Brown faces Hussmann at 7 o'clock.

Laboure Seeks 4th Victory in C.A.C.

Laboure, a school that is still seeking to make an athletic name for itself, could fashion several large letters of such a moniker by winning a basketball game tonight. Bob Goodwin's team will go after its fourth straight Catholic Athletic Conference victory when it is host to strong St. Mary's at 8 o'clock tonight.

Laboure has defeated DuBourg, McBride, and Mercy, thus far, but may have the toughest part of its first round still coming in St. Mary's and DeAndreis. St. Mary's has a 2-1 record.

Other C.A.C. games tonight are DeAndreis (2-1) at Mercy (0-3) and McBride (2-1) at DuBourg (0-3).

DeAndreis's Ken Donnelly is the C.A.C.'s leading scorer with 57 points in three games.

The leaders, all with three games:

Ken Donnelly, De Andreis	— — —	57
Sal Liparoto, McBride	— — —	44
Jim Meinert, DeAndreis	— — —	43
Fred Leiding, Mercy	— — —	41
Bill O'Brien, Mercy	— — —	39

Gordon and Beitch Win With Comeback

Straight-set victories were the rule in the Y.M.H.A. Class B handball tournament, and the exception was provided by Jules Gordon and Herman Beitch. After losing the opener, 19-21, they rallied to win, 21-8 and 21-15, last night.

In other matches, Jerry Molos and Harvey Feldman defeated Irv Walpert and Irv Neal, 21-18, 21-15; Dave Bernstein and Ben Goldman defeated R. J. Walters and Ed McSweeney, 21-8, 21-17; Ed Dubman and Jerry Korn defeated Ben Toibb and Ted Harris, 21-6, 21-9; Nat Dubman and Morris Bidnick defeated Morris Reiter and Jerry Schrier, 21-10, 21-6, and Gus Morganstern and Ed Koshner won by default from William Kreuger and partner.

Berkeley Triumphs.

Although Bob Berry scored 20 points, Hazelwood High School's basketball team lost to Berkeley, 57-46. Jim Howe paced the winners with 16 points.

Two Matches Go Full Route in 'Y' Handball

Three-set matches enlivened the competition in both the Class A and the Class B divisions of the Downtown Y.M.C.A. doubles handball tournament last night.

In Class A, Ed Stein and Grover Resinger deefated Earl Baker and Marlowe Phillips, 8-21, 21-9, 21-15. Dr. Stan London and Al Goldstein defeated Bill McGreevy and Larry Kickham, 21-15, 21-18, in another Class A match. In Class B, the three-set match was won by Leach Cross and Joe Chorlins against Ray Sotler and Fred Thumin, 19-21, 21-2, 21-15.

In other Class B matches, Marv Heifner and Charles Vivirito defeated Bob Nelson and Ken Moriarity, 21-12, 21-9; and M. Phillips and Steve Sudzinski defeated Jim Pontos and E. Hasse, 21-11, 21-13.

Billy Welu Rolls Into First Place in Match-Game Eliminations

St. Louis Star Has 1279 Series

CHICAGO, Jan. 18—Billy Welu of St. Louis took the lead today after 64 bowlers had rolled in the qualifying play of the All-Star bowling tournament here. Welu turned in games of 202, 205, 201, 217, 226 and 228 for a series of 1279 to give him a 24-game, fourth-round total of 5108.

Pat Patterson, another St. Louisan, shot games of 185, 193, 196, 170, 194 and 203 for 1141, or a total for the 24 games of 4785.

Ed Lubanski, Detroit, rolled a 1308 series which included a 246 game, giving him a total of 4943. Peter Trynasty, Seattle, Wash., got 1101 today to run his total to 4930.

Junie McMahon, Fair Lawn, N.J., held the lead after yesterday's firing with 3844 for 18 games.

McMahon thus went into today's final qualifying round with a 213-plus average.

The 46 top bowlers in the men's and women's divisions after today's bowling will qualify for the semi-finals, which will be run off tomorrow.

After tomorrow's bowling, top 16 in each division will begin the four-day match play for the championship in both divisions.

Merle Matthews of Long Beach, Calif., led the women at the end of three days with a 2435 total for 12 games. She was the only woman who was averaging over 200 with her 202-plus average.

Norma Jean Porbes of New Orleans was second among the women with a 2351 score.

Yesterday's high series was recorded by Carl Berger of Chicago with games of 224-233-195-224-248-257. Tom Hennessey of Detroit, former St. Louisan, had the high individual game with a 279.

In the special match block, Bill Lillard of Detroit led Don Carter of St. Louis, 30.26 points to 26.33 points. Lillard outshot Carter yesterday, 1326 to 1233 and leads 3922 to 3720.

Welu had gone into today's fourth round tied for second place with Trynasty with 3829. Patterson had a 3644 total after yesterday.

Another St. Louis entry, Ray Bluth, fared poorly in the third round, scoring 1130 for an 18-game total of 3501.

In the special women's match game, defending champion Marion Ladewig of Grand Rapids, Mich., led Sylvia Wene of Philadelphia, Pa., 18.07 points to 15.08 points at the end of three days.

Match play in the tournament begins Thursday and ends Sunday.

Scores of St. Louis bowlers (after 18 games):
Ray Bluth—198-166-177-191-180-218—1130—3501

PREP PARADE

Vashon Has a Few Shortages, But Foes Can't Count on Them

Vashon High's basketball team has no home gym, no tall players, and not many opponents, but Coach Jodie Bailey's squad may be one to be reckoned with at state tournament time. The Wolverines raised some eyebrows last Friday when they defeated one of the district's best teams, St. Louis U. High, by a 62-60 score on the Junior Billikens' court.

It was only the seventh game of the season for Vashon, though St. Louis U. High and most of the other teams in the area have played twice that many.

"We'll play anybody at any time," Bailey said, "but it is difficult to get a full schedule. We were making the mistakes against St. Louis that they probably overcame a month ago. I only have two lettermen and the newer boys need experience, but we did do all right the other night."

Among the boys who did more than all right against the squad that beat Cleveland in a Normandy tournament final was Albert (Skinny) Morton, a familiar sight to the Junior Bills.

"Skinny was a standout when we lost to St. Louis in a double-overtime game two years ago," Bailey said, "when we had a season record of 25 and 2. When they held him to 24 points Friday, it was his lowest total of the season. Before then he had been averaging nearly 30 a game."

Morton, a six-foot-one senior, was a defensive star against the Junior Bills, as well as the top scorer.

There is a possibility that Morton might play for McKinley High during the second semester, when the schools are integrated. He lives in McKinley's district and will have the option of attending that school or remaining at Vashon.

Vashon is one of several public high schools in St. Louis that does not have a basketball court on which to play other teams. Occasionally the Wolverines use the Pine Street Y.M.C.A. floor, but because the court is only 60 feet long and there is little room for spectators, it is difficult to get other teams to play there.

"Part of our scheduling problems will be solved next season when we join the Public High League," Bailey said.

Vashon has won four games and lost three. Victims, in addition to St. Louis U. High, were Franklin of St. Charles, twice, and Washington Tech. The Wolverines were beaten by one point by both Sumner and Lovejoy, and lost by six points to Lincoln of East St. Louis.

The other letterman that Bailey has, 5-10, John Ingram, will graduate at the end of this semester.

His tallest boy is James Tate, six-foot-three, but he alternates at one of the forward spots with Eddie Curry, who is six-two. Ralph Simmons, 5-8, and Richard Sanders, 6 even, share the other starting position. Simmons, a playmaker, was out of the St. Louis game because of an ankle injury.

* * *

Lowell Lucas made 15 consecutive free throws for Pattonville as his team defeated Berkeley, 58-55, in a North County League game last week. Lucas's total of 30 points was a school record.

* * *

Herschel O'Kelley, all-district star at Webster Groves High last season, scored 35 points in a recent freshman game at Southern Methodist University. Rich Herrscher, of Cleveland High, made 18 in the same game.—J.J.A.

Junior Bills in Big Game With East St. Louis

There are few teams that can equal St. Louis U. High at being able to be "up" for the big one, and the Junior Billikens will have to be at their peak tonight when they meet East St. Louis High at Ainad Temple.

The game is one of three contests that St. Louis U. High has scheduled with nearby Illinois powers, all of them on courts across the river. After East St. Louis, there will be a game with Collinsville on Feb. 4 and one at Madison on Feb. 17.

As one of the Missouri side's best teams, with a record of 11 and 3, the trio of games should add facts to the year-round discussion concerning which state produces the better basketball.

Coach Pick Dehner's East Siders have an 11-1 record, with their only loss coming in the final of their own tournament. Dupo won, 62-54. The Flyers' victims include such strong teams as Belleville, Alton, Madison and Jacksonville.

St. Louis U. High's first loss was in a double-overtime struggle with Beaumont, then an upset by St. Teresa of Decatur when ailing Coach Hank Raymonds was unable to accompany the team. The Junior Bills were handed their third loss by Vashon last week, 62-60.

Ozark Women's Swim Entry of 40 Is Expected

Between 40 and 50 entries are expected for the annual Ozark A.A.U. swim championships for women, Jan. 30, it was estimated today by Dick Bell, swim coach at the Y.M.H.A. Pool. Bell said his organization will have a strong team of 15 members.

The 11-event program will start at 1 p.m. with preliminary heats; finals will start at 2:30.

The entry list will be closed Jan. 25, it was announced by Mrs. T. G. Hughes, chairman of the Women's Swimming Committee. Her address is 401 Chanslor, Ferguson. Individual entry fee is 75 cents per event; relay entries $3 per team. Blanks may be obtained from Mrs. Hughes or from Coach Bell.

Beaumont No. 1 In DeAndreis Meet

Beaumont was seeded No. 1 in the DeAndreis basketball tournament, which will be held Jan. 31-Feb. 2. The Bluejackets will face Laboure in an opening night upper bracket game. DeAndreis was seeded No. 2, C.B.C. No. 3, and St. Mary's No. 4.

Central will play St. Mary's in the other upper-bracket contest. Lower bracket openers will be McBride vs. C.B.C. and Chaminade vs. DeAndreis.

U. City Pools Talents.

Double winners simplified things for the University City swimming team yesterday afternoon in a 52-25 victory over McKinley at the Downtown Y.M.C.A. Jack Holsberg won the 50-yard and the 100-yard freestyle events, and Jerry Weisman won the 150-yard individual medley and the 200-yard freestyle, to stack up points for University City.

Wyatt's Jump Not a Record

CHICAGO, Jan. 18 (UP)—Norman Wyatt, the 1954 National A.A.U. indoor high jump champion, missed a world's record by three-fourths of an inch Saturday night at the Boston Knights of Columbus meet, it was revealed here today.

It was erroneously reported Saturday by Dan Ferris, National A.A.U. secretary-treasurer, that Wyatt had set the world's record with his jump of 6 feet, 10 inches.

Wyatt corrected himself today and said the world's record is still held by Ken Wiesner, the Milwaukee dentist and former Navy lieutenant, who cleared 6 feet, 10¾ inches in the Chicago Daily News relays March 28, 1953.

Wiesner's mark was approved as an American indoor record at the National Amateur Athletic Union convention, Nov. 27-29, 1953, in Washington.

Nischwitz Is Leader.

Augie Nischwitz, 724 and Dick Volling, 704, paced the Authorized Brakes to 3183, high team total in the All-Star Bowling League on the Floriss alleys last night. Results: Sun Crest 3, Budweiser 0; Griesediecks 2, Pepsi Cola 1; Authorized Brake 2, Boland 1; Cuquet 2½, Daves ½.

STOCKS SNAP BACK IN A VIGOROUS RALLY

Recovery From Steep Fall Comes as Chinese Reds Storm Nationalist Island.

NEW YORK, Jan. 18 (AP)—The stock market dashed ahead today in a reversal from its heavy dro pof yesterday.

Aircrafts were buoyant in the midst of new Chinese Red aggression against the little nationalist island ow Yikiangshan off the mainland of China. All other major divisions also were higher.

Gains extended on out to around 6 points as in the case of Douglas Aircraft up 6⅜ at 125½. There were many advances of 1 to around 4 points.

Trading simmered down to an aggregate 3,020,000 shares as compared with 3,360,000 shares traded in yesterday's sharply falling market.

Associated Press average of 60 stocks closed up 1.3 points at 150.1. The industrial index was up 1.8 points, rail index up 1.4 points and utilities up .3 of a point. The industrial and total figures were revised yesterday to 203.1 and 148.8 respectively.

(Dow-Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was 2.78 points higher at 390.98 at the close. The 20 rails gained 1.22 at 139.06 and the 15 utilities were up .03 of a point at 62.09.)

The market was 6 issues narrower than yesterday at 1271 issues. There were 641 gainers, 373 losers and 257 unchanged. There were 13 new 1954-55 highs and 7 new lows.

The market was lower at the opening with selling brisk. Those offerings soon were absorbed, and prices steadied.

Within a few minutes, buyers thronged into the market in full force and scrambled for stocks at higher prices. The tape fell behind two minutes in reporting floor transactions.

Steels were the first major group to display improvements, and they soon were followed higher by the aircrafts, chemicals, and railroads. The improvement continued until only scattered backwardness was apparent.

A block of 40,000 shares of Texas Pacific Coal & Oil sold off ½ at 50, and 10,000 shares of T.X.L. Oil traded off ¼ at 37¾.

TIGHTENING OF MONEY SHOWS IN NEW FIELDS

NEW YORK, Jan. 18 (AP)—Commercial paper dealers have increased interest rates on their wares for the second time in less than a week.

Dealers rates on notes of companies of the highest credit rating were raised ¼ of one per cent, making four-to-six month paper at 1⅝ to 1⅞ per cent. Last Friday, these rates were upped ⅛ of 1 per cent. Rates of lesser known companies were increased proportionately.

The action followed quickly on the heels of a similar move by two of the nation's largest finance companies. General Motors Acceptance Corp. and Commercial Credit Corp. Tuesday morning raised their commercial paper rates by ¼ of 1 per cent. The interest rate paid by these companies will range from 1⅜ to 1¾ per cent for 30-day to nine-month notes.

Commercial paper in the money market term for unsecured notes of large companies. It is a means of borrowing for short periods on the basis of a company's reputation and credit rating in the financial community. Large finance companies sell their own commercial paper directly to investors. Smaller concerns borrow through dealers.

Yesterday, the Treasury sold $1,500,562,000 of its 91-day bills at an average interest rate of 1.407 per cent. This was the most the Government has had to pay to borrow money for three months since Dec. 28, 1953, when an issue sold at a 1.574 per cent rate.

Federal Reserve banks have recently been selling their holdings of Treasury bills in the open market. This tends to tighten the supply of investment capital in the banking system, which, in turn, has a firming effect on interest rates.

FIRST NATIONAL ADVANCES SUDEKUM TO COMPTROLLER

Election of Fred J. Sudekum, auditor of First National Bank in St. Louis, as vice president and comptroller was announced by the board of directors yesterday. Paul P. Turpin, who has been assistant auditor, was chosen to succeed him.

Sudekum has been with the bank and its predecessor institution since 1913 and has been auditor since 1946. In his new position he also will have charge of First National's building expansion and modernization program. He is a former chairman of the bank management committee of the Missouri Bankers Association.

Turpin has been with the bank since 1923, and assistant auditor since 1946.

U.S. BONDS FIRM LATE

NEW YORK, Jan. 18 (AP)—Treasury bonds firmed today while the corporate bond market drifted irregularly lower.

Dealers of U.S. Government securities reported a moderate pickup in demand. In later period, the 30-year 3¼s rose 4-32 at 108 4-32 bid. Victory loan 2½s of 1967-72 were up 2-32 at 97 26-32 bid and the 2½s of 1963 at 99 17-32 bid were up 1-32.

Italian dollar bonds were lower in a quiet foreign section. Corporate trading was selective but prices were generally lower. Changes were mostly fractions.

The Treasury yesterday sold slightly more than 1½ billion dollars of new 91-day bills at an average interest cost of 1.407 per cent. That's the highest borrowing cost for such financing since Dec. 28, 1953, when the charge was 1.574 per cent. Last week, a similar issue drew 1.222 per cent.

Other signs of firming interest rates were noted. Two of the nation's largest finance companies, General Motors Acceptance Corp. and Commercial Credit Co. raised their commercial paper rates ¼ of 1 per cent.

SOYBEAN STRENGTH FEATURE OF GRAINS

CHICAGO, Jan. 18 (AP)—Grains declined on the Board of Trade today after displaying early strength. Only soybeans resisted the sell-off. Wheat and soybeans raced ahead in early dealings when local professional traders took to the buying side. But there was no follow through to the demand. Later, wheat gave up all its gains on mild but persistent selling pressure. Feed grains firmed slightly during the morning, losing all their upturn later. Corn was weakest and it was noted the weekly weather bureau crop report said the open winter in the midwest had permitted conservation of feed.

The drop in wheat prices in the previous session apparently brought some new buying into the bread cereal, attracted by the fact wheat is selling below the Government loan. Brokers thought there also might have been short covering based on intensified fighting in the Formosa area.

St. Louis Cash Grain.

MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Jan. 18—Cash grain market Tuesday: Wheat receipts 6 cars, none sold; corn, 26 cars, 2 sold; oats, 1 car, 1 sold.

Sales were: Corn, No. 4 yellow $1.41½@1.47. Oats, No. 2 thin 80¼c.

Bran and shorts were 50 cents a ton higher at $44.25@44.75 and $48@48.50 respectively.

Soybean prices were 2¼c higher Tuesday. No. 2 yellow 30-day shipment, Missouri short rate $2.56¾ a bushel to producers. Illinois short rate $2.61¾ a bushel. Soybean oilmeal 44 per cent protein, $67 a ton bulk, Decatur.

LONDON STEADIES LATE

LONDON, Jan. 18 (AP)—The London Stock Exchange opened in a depressed atmosphere today following Wall street's set-back yesterday but fresh buying steadied the market here before the close.

British Government bonds remained unsettled. This was attributed to the continued weakness of sterling and news of the higher United States Treasury bill rate.

In the foreign bond list, Greeks and Japanese improved but Germans turned easier.

During the last hour industrials developed a firmer tone with leading issues largely recovering earlier declines.

2 DEMOCRAT GROUPS BACK TRANSIT PLAN

Hadley, Creve Coeur Organizations Indorse Proposal at Meeting.

The Metropolitan Transit District proposal received unanimous indorsement from the Democratic organizations of Hadley and Creve Coeur Townships at a meeting last night at St. Louis County Democratic headquarters, 7807 Forsyth boulevard, Clayton.

Seventy-five persons heard two members of the Board of Freeholders that drew up the plan explain its major provisions.

Charles M. Warner discussed the regulation of taxicabs and service cars, as well as of busses and streetcars by a District Commission, which would be established if the plan receives the approval of voters Jan. 25.

At present, Warner pointed out, power to license taxicabs and service cars is vested in the City of St. Louis and in each of the 96 incorporated municipalities of the county in which they operate. Under a Transit District there would be a central licensing body, without taking away the traffic regulation authority of the individual communities, the speaker stated. The commission would also regulate taxicab and service car schedules and fares, Warner added.

It also was pointed out that approval of the transit proposal does not mean automatic public ownership of mass transportation. Public ownership, which would require a separate majority vote in both the city and the county, was termed "the most misunderstood section of the plan" by Warner.

John W. Giesecke, answered questions about the plan, which he had a part in writing.

The plan was discussed at another county meeting last night, jointly sopnsored by Norman C. Parker, Republican Committeeman, and Robert Young, Democratic Committeeman, of Airport Township. The meeting, at Kratz School, in Normandy, heard Mayor Leo Hayes of Wellston, a member of the Board of Freeholders, outline various sections of the plan. Hayes also answered questions put by some of the 50 persons attending the gathering.

Questions indicated those present were interested in "where the money is coming from" for operation of the plan. Hayes replied that assessments for operating expenses of the District Commission would be levied against the transportation utilities, as is now done by the State Public Service Commission.

The executive committee of the Greater St. Louis Hills Home Owners Association, in Southwest St. Louis, has reaffirmed its earlier opposition to a transit district, it was announced today. The plan fails to provide improved mass transportation and fails to safeguard against increased fares or higher taxes, the committee contended.

Church Federation Officers at Dinner

DR. M'DOWELL HEADS CHURCH FEDERATION

Pastor of Ladue Chapel Elected by Metropolitan Group.

The Rev. Dr. W. Davidson McDowell, pastor of Ladue Chapel, 9450 Clayton road, was elected president of the Metropolitan Church Federation of St. Louis last night at the organization's forty-fifth annual dinner meeting, held at Ladue Chapel.

Dr. McDowell, who helped organize Ladue Chapel in 1943 as a community church, ministering to Protestants without regard to denomination, succeeds the Rev. Dr. Wesley H. Hager of Grace Methodist Church.

The Rev. James E. Cook of Antioch Baptist Church was named first vice president of the federation. Other officers were elected as follows:

J. Clinton Hawkins of St. Paul's Methodist Church, Jacob M. Lashley of Trinity Presbyterian Church, Mrs. W. Wilder Towle of Pilgrim Congregational Church, and the Rev. Theodore J. Rasche of Trinity Evangelical and Reformed Church, Belleville, all vice presidents.

Mrs. James C. Davis of Bellefontaine Methodist Church, secretary; Eugene L. Conrad of Southampton Presbyterian Church, treasurer, and George T. Guernsey III, Christ Church Cathedral, finance chairman.

Chairmen of the four administrative departments: Claude Welch, administration; the Rev. Dr. Lin D. Cartwright, Christian education; the Rev. Dr. Walter A. Scheer, spiritual ministries, and Dean Sidney E. Sweet, Christian community action.

Dr. McDowell was born at San Antonio, Tex., in 1912. He is a graduate of Missouri Valley College at Marshall, Mo., and Princeton Theological Seminary. He was pastor of First Presbyterian Church, Ferguson, for seven years.

More than 30 denominations now are represented in the Ladue church's membership of 1300.

The principal address last night was delivered by the Rev. Dr. J. Quinter Miller of New York, administrative secretary of the National Council of Churches. His subject was "Growing Together in Christ."

"By some mysterious alchemy of mind and heart," the speaker said, "the Christian churches are growing together. The resulting Christian unity is deep and genuine.

"This oneness in Christ transcends denominational divisions because unity of faith in Him is itself deeper than our divisions. This fact the people of St. Louis need to recognize and understand."

Dr. Miller suggested four fields for intensified co-operative effort: (1) Survey, church planning and adjustment; (2) Christian nurture or work in educating young people; (3) social welfare, and (4) changing social conditions, such as racial integration in schools.

U.S. SHIP HITS, SINKS JAP BOAT; ONE DEAD, 4 MISSING

TOKYO, Jan. 18 (AP)—The Japanese Coast Guard today said the United States military transport Gen. Patrick sliced through a Japanese fishing schooner in the Inland Sea last night, killing one Japanese and injuring two. Four are missing.

The fishing boat Mie Maru sank immediately.

The Coast Guard said the transport picked up three survivors but one died. The others, listed as in serious condition were landed at Moji.

U.S. PILOT, GERMAN WHO HELPED HIM IN WAR ARE REUNITED

NEW YORK, Jan. 18 (AP)—A wartime friendship between an American bomber pilot and a German Luftwaffe captain was renewed yesterday after a 10-year search.

Otto Bohlen, 67 years old, arrived here by ship and got an affectionate welcome from Allen D. Fischbach, 37, of Los Angeles, the man who had hunted for him since 1944.

After a raid over Poland, Fischbach and his crew parachuted from a shot-up bomber, and were taken prisoner at an airfield near Belgrade, Yugoslavia, commanded by Bohlen.

Ordered to take the four-man crew to Budapest, Hungary, Bohlen was marching them through a bombed-out section when a mob set upon them. Bohlen put up a successful fight for his prisoners, suffering a broken collarbone.

Ever since the war, Fischbach had tried to find his benefactor. German police finally traced Bohlen to Bergen-Enkheim, near Frankfurt, where he runs a soap factory.

Fischbach, west coast representative of Fischbach & Moore, an electrical contracting firm, invited the German and his wife here for a three-month stay.

Greatest % Increase in Sales—1954...
Greatest Value in 1955!
de Forest MOVIE-SQUARE Lineless TV²
Bidding for... 1st PLACE in this Area!

U. A. SANABRIA
OVER 500% INCREASE IN 1955...
American Television sold 5 times the television sets in 1954 over 1953
THE NAME de Forest and his work covers the entire history of radio and television. Dr. Lee de Forest is our director of Development and Research and is personally active at all times—giving us the benefit of his wise direction and counsel. The writer is celebrating his 31st year of active television work and we are especially proud of the Symbolic D'Sati Console, because we believe it is FIRST IN FURNITURE in the television industry.
We find great satisfaction in the de Forest FIRESIDE—the new model which is so easy on those people who like to rest with their head inclined slightly forward and down, as though looking into the fire and dreaming. Now television takes its place with the finer furniture of the home . . . the experimental period is over . . . and 1955 will see all America making television something to look at whether the picture is on or off—because it is a fixed part in everyone's heart and everyone's household . . . To say television has fulfilled our greatest dreams is not enough. The enthusiasm of all the world has carried it far beyond our fondest expectations.
We also take special pride this year in realizing we are the only organization that manufactures, sells, services, and trades its television set and guarantees it for 5 years—giving you that direct contact we think you deserve.
Wishing you . . . and our many TV owners . . . a Happy New Year and Good Viewing.

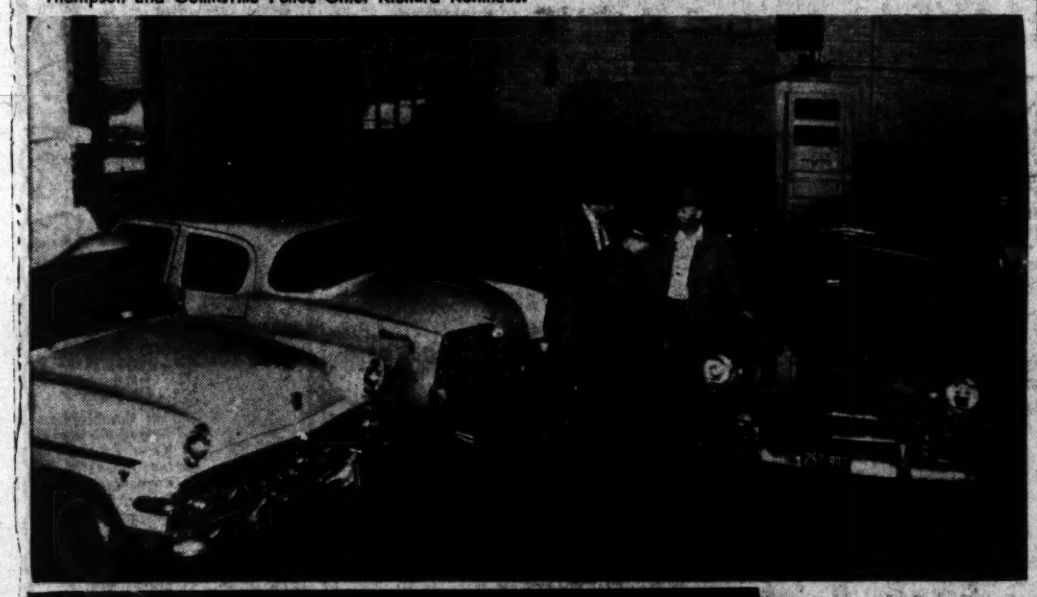
Auto Theft Ring Crackdown

Sections of late-model automobile which was being dismantled by auto thieves in garage at Collinsville are examined by three of the police officers who took part in raid on the garage today. Three Collinsville men were arrested in the crackdown on the theft ring, which police believe may have been operating on a nation-wide basis. At least 11 stolen machines were recovered since the investigation started. Nine had been sold to innocent persons. Officers (from left) are: Sgt. Emil J. Toffant of the Illinois Highway Police, Patrolman William H. Thompson and Collinsville Police Chief Richard Kohlhaas.



General view (above) of garage where stolen machines were stripped and rebuilt with parts from other stolen machines or from cars which were bought as junk after accidents. At left, Thompson and Toffant examine one of the partly-stripped machines. Titles which came with junked automobiles were used in sales of rebuilt or altered cars of the same model.

PROPOSED MISSOURI RIVER BRIDGE

Architect's concept of a new $8,500,000 bridge (foreground) across the Missouri river at St. Charles, which has been authorized by the State Highway Commission. The four-lane free bridge will carry United States Highway 40 over the river a mile upstream (south) of the present two-lane bridge (in background). The state has called for bids Jan. 28 on eight river piers, the first construction phase for the bridge. In addition to $8,500,000 for the bridge, the state estimates that four-lane connecting roads and approaches will cost $4,820,000.

The Dean Speaks Up

Notes on Personal Reading List for '54

By Adele Starbird

A MAGAZINE advertisement caught my eye, "Profile of a Cultivated Person." There followed a list of 27 books the cultivated person should have read within the past year. Hopefully I started down the list. I went over it with dismay a second time. It didn't seem possible that anybody who knows how to read could have missed all of them, but I had managed it. Five of the titles I still intend to read, perhaps two or three years from now, for I feel no compulsion to keep up to date.

DEAN STARBIRD

So I marked myself zero. What then had I done with my reading time? I went around the room pulling down the new books and then I made my own list. It is not properly diversified, it is haphazard and I don't recommend it. But this is my booty, wrested from the pirates of time in the year 1954:

"Aspects of Buddhism," Henri de Lubac, S. J. (A treasure).

"The Doors of Perception," Aldous Huxley.

"The Prayer of the Church Universal," Marc Boegner. (Excellent).

"The Living Brain," W. Grey Walter.

"The Transformation of the Scientific World View," Karl Heim.

"The Very Thought of Thee." Excerpts from Bernard de Clairvaux and others, with Introduction by Douglas Steere. (Also excellent.)

"Unwilling Journey," Helmut Gollwitzer. (By this time everybody knows I practically read the print off the pages.)

"Christian Realism and Political Problems," Reinhold Neibuhr.

There's never a dull moment with Neibuhr. But I often think of the woman who was asked if she could understand Neibuhr. "Oh yes," she replied confidently, "I understand every word he writes. And occasionally I get a WHOLE sentence!"

WHEN I CAME HOME from the West Indies last January, I began reading up on the Caribbean. One is supposed to read before, not after a trip. But if there isn't time enough to find out where one is going, it is desirable at least to discover where one has been.

"The Caribbean, Sea of the New World," by German Arciniegas. Fascinating history. The chess game of the European kings in the sixteenth century was played out in the islands of the Caribbean.

"The Traveller's Tree, A Journey Through the Caribbean Islands," Patrick Leigh Fermor. Written with splash and verve, it is accurately observed and up to the minute.

Together these two books give an excellent background for understanding the islands.

While I was down there I poked around in bookshops, and had a good many books shipped home—histories by Dantes Bellegarde, volumes on voodoo, novels by various young islanders. There is a flourishing new school in literature and art. One of the novels, written by two brothers, won the Latin-American prize. Their second, "The Pencil of God," was published first in English by the Riverside Press, with an introduction by Edmund Wilson.

A friend gave me from her own library a beautiful book on Martinique by Lafcadio Hearn, written in 1887. It is quite authentic, even today.

★ ★ ★

ALL TOLD there are only 16 titles, including the books I brought home from my trip and read. Of course, I have read over again many of my old books, but that doesn't count. In fact, Somerset Maugham thinks that re-reading is a waste of time. It seems to me, however, that each person has to follow his own pattern, something he has worked out unconsciously.

I rush through a book on the first reading, pausing for nothing. If I care for it, I lay it aside to be re-read after a month or two. This time I read it with leisure, marking significant passages so that I may find them again with ease. A book I really love may receive four or five readings over a period of years.

Such a method may be extravagant. But there is more satisfaction in knowing one man's mind thoroughly than in bowing once to 20.

Taking Turns

By Angelo Patri

"HAPPY birthday, Berta. And look what Aunt Ida has sent you." Berta, aged 15 this birthday, was the oldest of a family of five. The camera was something she had longed to own and to have it at last was pure joy. She danced about hugging it, examining it over and over with renewed delight.

Suddenly Sue, aged half past 5, began to cry. "I want it; I want it. You give it to me."

"But Sue, this is Berta's birthday and that is her present from Aunt Ida. Remember how she sent you that lovely doll on your birthday? Berta did not get anything that time. You had a cake and the doll and all those other things. Remember? Now it's Berta's turn."

"I don't care. It isn't fair. She gets everything."

★ ★ ★

THIS IS LIKELY TO HAPPEN in any family where there are a number of children. The only thing one can do is to keep explaining that sometimes there is just one of the group to be favored. "It is his turn. You had your turn," or "You will have your turn."

Children, even the younger ones, must learn that there are times when they are onlookers, just as there are times when the others look on while they have their turn. If we accent the fact that they, alone, have a hobby horse or a high chair, or a doll while all the others have none, they will come to understand that they are individuals and learn to accept their position.

This takes a bit of doing and sometimes, according to the teachability of the younger one, some time. For example, there is the bedtime trouble. The oldest child is allowed to stay up longer than the younger ones and that brings protests and tears. The oldest girl is allowed to use a light nail color and a touch of lipstick. The next younger girl wants the same "right" and must be persuaded to wait her turn.

★ ★ ★

THIS WHOLE PROCESS of teaching children to accept their limitations and to begin to look upon themselves as individuals with personal privileges and rights and possessions is a discipline that strengthens character and develops personality. It is not easy on the parents but then bringing children to wholesome maturity never was and never will be easy. But it has its rewards.

When a father and mother see a child take pride in his own being, cherishing his own privileges and possessions, becoming a personality, the troubles encountered along the way seem trifling.

'King of Comedy'

'A Pretty Girl Is Not Statistics'

No Rules for Picking Actresses, Says Sennett; Mabel Normand's Escapades

By Mack Sennett
As Told to Cameron Shipp

Third and final installment from the book, "King of Comedy," just published by Doubleday & Co. Mack Sennett's collaborator, Cameron Shipp, is a widely known biographer of Hollywood personalities.

MABEL NORMAND PLUS DOG ENTERS THE OLD HOLLYWOOD HOTEL—LATE AS USUAL.

I HAVE been asked how I selected pretty girls for motion pictures. I don't know. So far as I am able to find out, Flo Ziegfeld never knew either. There are no rules.

The stories you read in newspapers and magazines, illustrated with photographs of directors measuring lovely women with tapelines, are the routine fables of press agents. A pretty girl is not a set of statistics.

What I looked for was charm. If you try to pin me down for a definition of charm, I'm stuck again. But I think any all-American male with reasonably good eyesight knows what I mean.

The only absolute rule that we had about the beauties on the Mack Sennett lot was that if some comedian were going to help some girl get ahead in the acting profession by dating her he got fired.

Six-foot Blanche Payson, the policewoman, was on hand to enforce this law.

At the Mack Sennett Studio, Mabel Normand had worked hard and done as she pleased.

She was late for everything. She was at the heart of every prank. She called me "Napoleon" and shortened it to "Nappy" in derision. If I went to her dressing room, to be sure she reached the set on time, she made fun of me, teased me, changed the subject, pouted, and acted as if she had never heard of the picture she was supposed to be working in.

She would throw me out and I would stalk to the set, scowling, ready to explain to the director that our star Miss Normand had a headache and would be detained. But Mabel would have taken a short-cut and beat me to the stage.

There she would be, playing her part as if she had been before the camera all morning and hadn't clapped eyes on me for days.

She gave Sam Goldwyn and his directors and business office people the same treatment. She never reported for work on time. She sassed the executives, then sat on their desks and twinkled her pretty eye, and made them laugh. She paraded around the lot, tagged by a liveried chauffeur burdened with an armload of mink and books, making like a movie star.

More than halfway through one of Goldwyn's expensive pictures she failed to show up at all one day. Next thing the office knew about her was from Associated Press reports under a Paris date line. She ordered the smartest clothes Parisienne couturieres could overcharge her for, danced with princes and flitted about the cafes.

She went to England and gave high-diving exhibitions on the estate of a swanky member of Parliament. The newspapers were flashy with the names of titled foreigners who wanted to marry her.

Late one night I got a trans-Atlantic call through to her.

"For God's sake, cut out the spree and come home," I said.

"Why?" asked Mabel.

"I need you," I said.

"You had me," Mabel said.

She tinkled a champagne glass against the receiver.

"I have a great new picture for you, Mabel," I argued.

"'S'no good, Nappy," Mabel said, "my contract with Sam has a long time to run."

"If you don't come home and work out that contract it will run forever," I told her.

Mabel laughed at me.

When she did return there were stories in the newspapers about how she had dived into the ship's swimming pool sans bathing suit. I've heard this gossip repeated but I've never believed it.

Mabel was casual, foolish—anything you want to say in the framework of those terms—but in all personal things she never violated good taste.

MY mother was on the farm in Canada, a place she had bought years ago.

Mother had a magic way with the soil. Things sprouted and grew for her. She had handsome cattle and prize pigs. She had a 390-pound sow which she raised by hand from a shoat which invaded the house and tried to sit on people under the impression it was a lap dog.

I had always avoided agricultural labor. But there came a time when I sought out mother's farm as a happy and restful place. When Paramount-Publix failed in 1935, I went there to lick my wounds and think things over.

The big studio went into bankruptcy and I went with it. I lost the studio, the acres of land I had bought in Los Angeles—I lost the whole shebang which once was valued at $15,000,000.

I was wiped out.

How does it feel to lose everything you've worked for all your life? How does it feel to lose $15,000,000?

Well, how does it feel to lose a leg? It hurts.

I was glad that mother was in Canada and was unaware of the extent of my financial wounds. She suspected something wrong, but I think she never knew that I had been ruined.

I spent a gentle three months with her, and then she died, peacefully, in her sleep.

When my mother's will was read I discovered things I never knew until then about her good sense with money.

I had thought all the time that I was pampering an old lady when I let her buy things. Now it turned out that she had never made a foolish purchase.

The farm lands were valuable. There was a large insurance policy. Johns-Manville engineers pointed out that a rich vein of asbestos ran through the old farm. And petroleum engineers bugged their eyes at the artesian wells she had dug on her property so blessed by rainfall that it never needed water.

"Oil there, Mr. Sennett," they said.

Mother left it all to me.

Your Income Tax

Use Care in Picking Proper Form

By Frank O'Brien

(Second of a Series)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 (AP).

THE amount and kinds of income you had in 1954 determine which of the tax forms you are eligible to use.

You may have a choice of forms.

In that case, your choice will probably depend upon whether you decide to accept the standard deduction for personal expenses, or to itemize your deductions so as to get more than the standard allowance.

The standard allowance is approximately 10 per cent of your adjusted gross income; that is, 10 per cent of your total income after any business-connected deductions have been subtracted. Deductions will be discussed in articles seven and eight of this series.

There are just two basic individual income tax forms—1040 and 1040A. But 1040 can be used as either a short form or a long form. There is no separate short form 1040 or long form 1040.

The forms have been considerably revised this year to conform to the new tax law. But the 1954 Federal income tax forms are basically the same as those used now for many years.

Persons with adjusted gross income of $5000 or more must use form 1040. In doing so, they may either itemize their personal deductions, or take the standard deduction allowance.

Persons with income of less than $5000 may use form 1040A, short form 1040, or long form 1040, depending on the kinds of their income, and how they want to handle it.

There are a number of deciding factors. Here they are, beginning with form 1040A, the simplest tax return, through 1040 short and 1040 long.

1040A—To be eligible to use this form, your income during 1954 must fit these specifications:

1. It must be less than $5000. That means up to $4999.99. If it is a joint return, the combined income of husband and wife must not exceed $4999.99.

2. It must consist entirely of wages from which income tax was withheld and reported on a withholding form (W-2) you get from your employer or employers, or

3. of wages up to $4899.99 from which tax has been withheld, plus not more than $100 more of other wages, interest and dividends. This would not include dividend receipts excluded from your income, because only the taxable part counts in this $100. If it is a joint return, the husband and wife together must have no more than $100 of income from which taxes were not withheld.

4. Your income must not include receipts from any of the following if you are to use 1040A:

—annuities; rents; royalties; retirement income; business profits or professional earnings; farming; transactions in securities or other property; earnings as a participant in partnerships, estates or trusts; or reimbursed expenses which are taxable.

5. You may not use form 1040A if you want to deduct business-connected expenses from your income (such as traveling costs); or if you have a tax credit coming to you from dividend or retirement income; or if you claim the special "head of household" status or the new "joint return status" of a widow or widower whose spouse died in 1952, 1953 or 1954.

COMMISSIONER OF INTERNAL REVENUE T. COLEMAN ANDREWS urged all who are eligible to use form 1040A: "This card-type form was specifically designed to make tax filing as easy as possible for many millions of taxpayers. For those millions who can use it, it is simplicity itself. The ease of preparation will save the user time and inconvenience. We will save time and money because the card processing is accomplished mechanically. Our savings are the taxpayers' in the final analysis, for it is the taxpayers' money that pays for the collection of the nation's revenues."

As previously, users of this form simply put down their name and social security number (husband and wife), address, whether or not it is a joint return, total wages, total taxes withheld, other income, credits and exclusions, and list exemptions.

The wages, withholdings, other income, credits and exclusions of both husband and wife are set down separately on the card if it is a joint return.

You then put the card, along with your W-2 forms, in an envelope mailed with the form, and send it to the district director.

The district director's office, using this information, figures your tax for you and sends you a bill or refund.

The special credit (line 11 on the card) is for any excess social security payments you or your wife may have made last year, and will be discussed in the sixth article of this series. The exclusion (line 12) is for pay received wife off work due to sickness and will be discussed in the fifth article of the series. If you claim either of these, you should enclose a written explanation with your 1040A return.

The box at line 10 on the 1040A card, for "other income" is for all income other than wages on which taxes have been withheld. This would include any wages on which tax has not been withheld, interest, and dividends. You may exclude $50 of your dividend income under the law, entering only the remainder. If it is a joint return, your wife is entitled to a separate $50 exclusion.

If what you and your wife (if it is a joint return) enter at line 10 adds up to more than $100, you may not use 1040A, even though your total income might be well under $5000.

★ ★ ★

A SPECIAL, single-page instruction sheet for form 1040A was mailed with the form, in addition to the regular instruction booklet. It tells you how to use the form, line by line.

Short form 1040—Here, your adjusted gross income must be less than $5000—up to and including $4999.99, that is. You may have total income of over $5000 and still use this form if your deductions for employe expenses cut your adjusted gross income to under $5000.

Any sort of income may be reported on this form, so you may want to use this short form 1040 if you are forced off of 1040A by some kind of income that may not be reported there. For instance, if you want to claim a tax credit for dividend income, or have any retirement or rental income, you must use form 1040, short or long.

Also, if you have some employe expenses that you want to deduct from your income (not possible with 1040A), this is your next simplest form. These business-connected deductions, in general, include certain reimbursed expenses, and costs to you as an employe of travel and transportation, or your expenses as an outside salesman.

You may use this form and deduct from your tax any credits you have coming to you from dividend or retirement income. But you may not itemize personal expense deductions and still use the short form.

A table on the back page of the instructions mailed to you with your tax forms will tell you your tax liability according to your marital status, the number of your exemptions, and the size of your adjusted gross income. The table automatically gives you the standard allowance for personal deductions.

Long form 1040—Regardless of the size of your income, if you want to itemize your personal deductions, you must use the long form. If your adjusted gross income is over $5000 you must use it, whether you want to itemize, or want to take the standard deduction for personal expenses.

The principal difference between long and short 1040 is that in using the long form you work out your tax liability yourself, instead of finding it in a table. You get the help of a table, on page 14 of the instructions, that does part of the work for you after you have found your taxable income.

The next article, No. 3, in this series, will deal with the joint return, in which important changes have been made by the new tax law, and requirements for filing as a head of household.

TOMORROW: The new law on joint returns.

Many Uses for a Bench

By Elizabeth Hillyer

PERHAPS just one more piece of furniture in the room would solve half a dozen problems. A bench, for example, in the benchtable style that's so popular today. Cushion it all the way, and it adds extra seating comfort to the room, so much of it for so little furniture bulk. This is quite a point if larger furniture would crowd the room, or if a view from a wide window must be uninterrupted.

Or the bench might settle the question of where to put the television set. Even with the TV set there's room to spare, for a cushion in the center and table space on one end, or for books and plants and accessories, to decorate a short wall.

The bench can always be a coffee table all the way, and it's wide enough to set up a buffet supper. The plus talent of a bench is that it can serve so well, first one way and then another. It falls in line at any time with changing arrangements, either for everyday family convenience, or for special occasions.

My Day

Bad Examples of Elders

By Eleanor Roosevelt

NEW YORK.

TWO books were sent to me as I was traveling the past two weeks, and one of them I have had a chance to glance through. It was written by a young Chinese girl now married to an American. She was born in Peiping and the book is the story of her youth and of her subsequent adventures. She must have had great courage, for the adventures started when she was very young. The book is called "Daughter of the Khans" and is written by Liang Yen. I think everyone will find it interesting and pleasant reading.

The other book is "The Soul of Ann Rutledge" by Mrs. Bernie Babcock. Of course, there is some controversy on this subject, as some people think that there never was an Ann Rutledge romance. But in the introduction to this book the author tells of having information both from Mrs. Saunders, Ann's sister, and also a copy of material prepared by her older brother, Robert Rutledge. Mrs. Babcock feels that her story is "no myth or ill-born fantasy." I have always liked the story of Ann Rutledge and I am sure that you will find this easy and enjoyable reading.

THE SECOND INSTALLMENT of the report by a Senate Investigating Committee on Juvenile delinquency written by Herbert W. Beaser and Richard Clendenen in the Saturday Evening Post is very interesting because it gives us some definite things to think about.

In pointing out the changes in the home lives of our children, which have come about through modern invention in the past 60 years, the automobile comes in for a share of blame. It has put the whole nation on wheels and we move much more easily than we used to do.

The protection of a stable community no longer exists for most children. But the thing which struck me most was pointing the finger at the ways in which we older people give our young people bad examples. I often have driven slightly faster than a posted speed limit, but I never have thought that actually was encouraging the young people to break the law—and that they would do it with less judgment and more recklessness than their elders.

To give an example to the young of being law-abiding is not as easy as we usually think. I am glad that there are to be more installments on this subject because I think these two reporters will needle our consciences in a way that may be very good for us.

IN HOLIDAY MAGAZINE there is an article on Israel, "Land of the Bible," by Joan Comay, the wife of Israel's Ambassador to Canada. It is a fascinating article and the pictures accompanying it are beautiful. I think it will be enjoyed by many people.

Another article in this magazine which I particularly liked is the one on Puerto Rico. I have not been to Puerto Rico in many years, but I remember it very vividly and can recall that it had great charm. I have hoped that the opportunity would present itself to go there again in the future.

MEDICAL JOURNAL REPORTS PROOF YOU CAN SPARE YOUR FAMILY DAYS OF SUFFERING FROM COUGHS OF COLDS
Here's Relief So Different It Will Change All Your Ideas About Cough Syrups
Six Leading Cough Syrups Tested in Medical Center. Results Vital to You.
Never before could any leading cough syrup promise you so much. Think of it! A new kind of cough syrup specially made, not only to relieve coughing faster and more completely, but also shorten the duration of the cough!
Here are Facts:
After testing six leading cough syrups on patients for two years, doctors reported that new Vicks Medi-trating Cough Syrup not only quickly relieved coughing spells and irritating throat dryness, but also cut the duration of the cough by as much as two full days.
Cetamium Is the Answer
One reason for this, the report concluded, is that Vicks contains a new penetrating ingredient — Cetamium — that carries relief-bringing medicine right to the cough-irritated crevices of the throat — medicates as it penetrates. In addition, Vicks Medi-trating Cough Syrup also works through the system to help speed breaking up of the cough.
Doctors also learned that Vicks Medi-trating Cough Syrup does not upset stomach or appetite. This feature, plus its pleasant flavor, makes it ideal for children.
So spare your family days of suffering from coughs of colds. Use new Vicks Medi-trating Cough Syrup.
MEDICAL JOURNAL REPORTS:* Matched, point for point, against five other leading cough preparations, Vicks Cough Syrup:
1. Helped reduce the duration of the cough by 2 full days.
2. Started to bring relief 39% faster than the average.
3. Brought more complete relief from coughs.
4. Was the only preparation tested that did not upset the stomach of a single patient.

Martha Carr's OPINION

Dear Martha:

MY son was married at a large wedding last November. As yet, he and his wife have never sent out the thank-you cards for wedding gifts. True, they were on their wedding trip for a week but that still leaves quite a few weeks when they could have done so. A number of people have called me wondering if the gifts were received. It is very embarrassing to me when they ask me. However, I hate to say anything to my daughter-in-law because of all the talk these days of mothers-in-law who don't mind their own business, but sometimes it is pretty hard not to say anything when such bad manners are so obvious.

JUST WAITING.

The bride is certainly getting off to a bad start with her friends and relatives, and those of the bridegroom, by her negligence and discourtesy. No one expects a thank-you note within the first few days after the wedding—although many smart brides get most of them out of the way before the ceremony—but they do have the right to be thanked before two months have gone by. I think all you can do, if you know the gift has been received, is to say so, mention how much your daughter-in-law likes the particular present, and tell the friend that you feel sure she will be hearing shortly. You also could mention it to your son if you can do so in such a way that you won't seem to be criticizing his bride.

Dear Martha:

IN YOUR COLUMN recently you had a letter from a 34-year-old man who was married to a 20-year-old woman and he resented her going to parties rather than helping him in the office which he maintained at home. I didn't think you gave him the best answer to his problem. My husband started a business at our home and I have always helped him in every way that I could. He is very proud of me for what interest I have shown and helped to build our business up to a good going concern. I too have great pride in this accomplishment and feel this young wife would also experience the same pride if she would help him more. Nothing will bring them closer together. I hope you will have a little sympathy for this man who wants to make a success of the business. WORKING WIFE.

Dear Martha:

I MUST TAKE A FEW MINUTES to thank you for letting me know about the Golden Age Club at Second Presbyterian Church, 4501 Westminster place. I was a very old lady until I went there, but I have enjoyed every Wednesday afternoon from 3 to 5:30. You meet the nicest people, both men and women. We have entertainment, then refreshments, then play games or do handiwork. There are lots of people over 50 who are as lonely as I was so please let them know. We have over 50 attending now. L.E.F.

I'm glad you found new friends there. The Golden Age Club is one of the outstanding organizations for men and women over 50, and its members will always welcome visitors. There are other groups in town, too, which do an equally fine job in providing recreation and friendship for older people who are lonely. Among them are the Get Together Club at Grace Hill House, 2600 Hadley street, 10 a.m. Tuesday; Over 50 Club, Chouteau House, 3673 West Pine, 7:30 p.m. Thursday; Friendship Group, North Side Y.M.C.A., 3100 North Grand boulevard, 8 p.m. Friday.

Martha Carr's free Valentine leaflet will suggest games for your party. Please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request.

Enjoyed Her Job Feeding College Boys

They're Always Hungry, Says 'Miss Rose' Fallenstein, Retired After 34 Years at Washington U.

By Clarissa Start

COLLEGE boys of today aren't much different than the college boys of the roaring 'twenties, the depression darkened 'thirties or the regimented 'forties.

"They're just like college boys always have been. Hungry." So says "Miss Rose" Fallenstein, retiring supervisor of food service and dormitories at Washington University, who has become an expert on the subject of eating habits of the college age male during 34 years at her job.

Rose Fallenstein, who's been "Miss Rose" to thousands of students, came to Washington University in 1920 when Lee Hall was remodeled into the main campus cafeteria. She has worked for five chancellors, catered for fancy parties and helped entertain visting dignitaries. But the part of her job she'll miss most as she adjusts to her retirement—which began officially Dec. 1—is the simple basic job of feeding boys.

"They've been wonderful boys," Miss Rose says. "So full of life you'd be anxious to get back to work each day to see what was going to happen next. Yet so thoughtful and courteous, too. In my dining room there was never anything out of order. And of the boys who worked for me—sometimes as many as 75—there was never a one who wasn't a conscientious worker."

Miss Rose has never regretted that she didn't get to follow her original ambition to become a nurse. She attended business college in her home town of Springfield, Ill., went to work for a food shop, where she gained valuable experience in purchasing food, and then became manager of the Y.W.C.A. cafeteria there. In 1920 a girl friend came to St. Louis to work and she came along. When she was offered the Washington University job she decided to take it "for a little while for the experience."

Her duties and attendant responsibilities increased rapidly. Soon she was managing campus cafeterias for the Medical School, the Dental School, the Women's Building, McMillan Hall, the School of Fine Arts, and the night school. There was catering to be done for teas, balls, dinners. While the Army and Air Force trainees were housed at the university during World War II, she fed 1600 boys a day and juggled ration points. Many times her working day began at 5 in the morning and ended at 10:30 at night.

There have been changes in every phase of campus life since "Miss Rose" started her job. She can remember the time that students didn't have cars, transportation was inadequate, and if a student came in to a fraternity meeting he'd have to stay all night.

"Often they'd sleep on the floors in the halls," she recalls.

There were the depression days, "when we didn't have dollars but we still had fun," she reminds you. "We'd move the tables out of the cafeteria, bring in a lot of corn shucks, and have a Halloween party."

Equipment with which to run the cafeterias has changed markedly. They had a dishwasher in what she refers to as "the olden days," but it "looked like a washtub." Ice cream once had to be packed in ice cream salt; now it's stored in a freezer.

—By a Post-Dispatch Photographer.

MISS ROSE FALLENSTEIN . . . ONLY FIASCO SHE RECALLS IN HER YEARS AS SUPERVISOR OF FOOD SERVICE AND DORMITORIES AT WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY WAS THE TIME SHE FORGOT THE TEA FOR A BIG TEA PARTY.

Eating habits of students haven't changed, however. Most of them still tend to be parent-pampered as freshmen and completely bewildered when it comes to choosing their own food. Many times Miss Rose has had to caution, "Don't eat all desserts." By the time they've become seniors they've developed some diet sense. College students always have been big milk drinkers; that's one of their good points, she thinks. She remembers during the '30s there sprang up quite a fondness for tomato juice, too. Especially early in the morning. She couldn't figure out why so many of the boys wanted tomato juice in the morning. Then someone enlightened her.

★ ★ ★

THE most popular menu always has been roast beef, mashed potatoes, peas, and pie, preferably apple, with other pie favorites. Not along ago Miss Rose heard from a student of many years ago who wanted her recipe for fig pie; he'd tried every chef on the West Coast and couldn't get it made right.

And there's a county official who invariably greets Miss Rose with, "Nobody could ever make cherry pie like yours."

Women students eat much less than men students—they're always dieting—and like their foods fancier. "But they are darlings, too," Miss Rose adds quickly.

You can't borrow any of Miss Rose's famous recipes because they're all made in quantities of 50. Quantity cooking never bothered her and she says she never had any worries that food wouldn't hold out.

"Organization was the answer; it's the only way to work," she says.

She recalls only one fiasco in all her years of work. It involved a big tea party to open McMillan Hall.

"It was beautiful," she describes. "The faculty and committee members had brought all their silver. We had little sandwiches and candy, cookies and nuts. The coffee was brought down from Lee Hall and all of a sudden someone said, 'Where's the tea?'"

Miss Rose had to admit she'd completely forgotten the tea, but her secretary was hastily dispatched to get it. It took her some time, she admits, to live down her tea-less tea.

Her favorite stories concern the boys who worked for her. The foreign students who tried to acclimate themselves to American cooking but were grateful, nonetheless, for the opportunity to take over the kitchen and the spice shelf now and then to make their native foods. The students who went to school on a shoestring.

"The boys took care of each other," she says proudly. "If another one needed a job more they'd give theirs up. Once the dean of men called and said, 'I have a boy here who'll have to drop out of school if you can't give him a job.'

"'I'm all filled up, I just can't,' I told him. 'I'd hate to see him drop out,' he said, 'he's a good boy.' So I went back to the kitchen and said, 'Boys, I have to feed another boy. If any of you have two jobs, could you give this one up?' One of the boys spoke up and said, 'This is my best job, but I'll give him my job at the lab and in June when I graduate, he can have this one.'"

★ ★ ★

SHE remembers another boy, a fairly snappy dresser, who came to her and told her he'd just found he had to earn his way and needed a job.

"You wouldn't want the only job I have," Miss Rose told him.

"How do you know?" he countered.

"Because it's a dishwashing job and you're not the kind of a boy to wash dishes."

"I'll take it," he said.

The boy proved a good dishwasher, and later was promoted to checker. The last Miss Rose heard he was vice president of a big company.

Many boys remember Miss Rose with Christmas cards and letters, and quite a few come back to visit her. She invariably astounds them by remembering their names even though they've been gone 10 or 20 years.

Some of the boys called her their "second mother." Some, she recalls, were the kind that "leaned on you . . . you had to see that they came out all right.

"Some boys you never got near. Others you were at home with right from the start," she says. "Not long ago one of the ones I'd gotten to know well came back to see me. Like many of the boys who graduate, and have to move off campus, he'd been keeping house for himself. He came up one day, grinning.

"'Can you come home for a minute?' he asked. I went along but kept asking, 'What's it all about?' He waited until we got inside, then brought out a loaf of bread. 'I baked it myself,' he said. 'Got any butter and jelly? We'll eat it now.'"

Since her retirement, Miss Rose has been entertained so much she'd hardly had a chance to do her own cooking, but she expects to settled down shortly in her apartment at 6918 Millbrook boulevard. A collector of antique furniture, china, American coins, she's active in St. John's Methodist Church circles, Altrusa Club, and was one of the first women members of the St. Louis Catering Association.

She'd been asked to teach a cooking class for children and has been offered another job, but she expects to take life easy with time out for volunteer work at the Y.W.C.A. and USO.

"It's been a wonderful life," Miss Rose says of her college career. "I've always said, I never married, but I've had a big family just the same."

Contract Bridge

By Ely Culbertson

EAST didn't do anything really silly in the hand below—he simply took a trick at his first opportunity — but he was nevertheless very helpful to the declarer.

West, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.

	♠AK63 ♥KJ104 ♦AK8 ♣J5
♠J9 ♥Q75 ♦92 ♣AKQ10 96	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠Q107 ♥A986 ♦4 ♣87432

3♣	Dble.	5♣	5♦
Pass	6♦	Pass	Pass
Pass

The pre-emptive tactic started by West and continued by East should have paid off, i.e., it seems to have spurred the opponents into all the greater aggressiveness, but the trouble was (from the East-West point of view) that South brought home the bad slam contract.

West was not too sanguine about bringing in a club trick, but any other lead looked downright dangerous, so he opened the club king. South ruffed, studied the situation for quite a while, then led a heart and put in dummy's ten. East took the trick and returned a club.

Now that declarer had been lucky in finding the heart queen on side, he buckled down to the plan he had outlined. He ruffed the club return, cashed the A-K of trumps and the A-K of spades, then cashed two more trumps, discarding a spade from the board. Thus far, East was in no trouble, but when South then cashed the last trump and threw off dummy's last spade, East was squeezed. If he gave up the spade queen, both of South's spades would be good, and if East surrendered a heart, declarer would of course take the proved finesse and collect all three heart tricks.

There are two highly pertinent points to be observed about this hand, one offensive, the other defensive. First, to have any chance, South had to lead the heart when he did, before touching trumps, otherwise he would have run up against insuperable communication difficulties. (Try this feature.) Next, the contract could not have been made if East had either (a) held up the heart ace on the first lead of that suit, or (b) after taking the trick as he did, had led a heart right back, thus knocking out South's second heart.

Overweight Teen

By Elinor Williams

IF you're a chubby girl . . . pardon me—slightly overweight—your clothes can help you look slimmer and prettier. Why not try it with your new school clothes?

Of course it's a good idea to omit unnecessary fattening foods, but a strict reducing diet can do you more harm than good. So let your clothes help to give you the confident feeling that you look your best while you're subtracting the gravy, potatoes, mayonnaise, rich desserts, etc., from your meals.

How? Avoid coarse-weave bulky sweaters and heavy, bundly wool fabrics. Choose blouses instead of sweaters whenever possible; wear smooth-weave wools such as flannel and gabardine. Suits should be smooth one-color styles with slightly flared skirts, never tight or narrow.

When you wear "separates," the jackets and skirts should be solid colors instead of plaids or checks. Choose streamlined colors such as navy, brown, pine green . . . wear smoothly gored, flared skirts instead of widely pleated ones.

Your dresses should be simple, one-piece, of smooth fabrics, in medium or deep colors with V-shape neckline, narrow belt and hemline flare.

Avoid wide belts, large jewelry, big collars or cuffs. Look for smooth, uninterrupted outlines in your clothes . . . no frills or fuss.

Social Problems

By Emily Post

A READER asks: "Is it necessary, even for the sake of politeness, to write thank-you notes for the gifts brought personally to my baby for which I thanked each one at the time?"

Answer: No. Not if you were able to look at these gifts when you said thank you.

★ ★ ★

DEAR MRS. POST: Are the wedding rings of the bride and the groom supposed to match? My fiance would like to buy him a ring, but he prefers a plain yellow band to wear and I would like a white gold band set with tiny diamonds.

Answer: Your ring and his do not have to match.

★ ★ ★

DEAR MRS. POST: My fiance and I had planned to announce our engagement within the next two weeks, when his father died suddenly a week ago. I have my ring but do not feel I should wear it until our engagement has been officially announced. I would like to know how long we should wait (out of respect to his father) before announcing our engagement?

Answer: You may announce your engagement any time. That is, tell your most intimate friends the news and send a notice to the newspaper. But no party should be given for at least several weeks.

★ ★ ★

DEAR MRS. POST: I am 16 years old and have an older married sister. When introducing her to friends of my own age, do I introduce her as "My sister Eileen," or as "Mrs. Jones."

Answer: You introduce her as "My sister Eileen, who is Mrs. Jones."

Answer to Question 1.

WHILE Erle Stanley Gardner, attorney and mystery writer, was lecturing to law students, lawyers and one judge, a weirdly dressed woman (a "plant") rushed in, pretended to stab him with a beer can opener, and dashed out. Eye-witnesses disagreed on her hair, dress, shoes and other details. None recalled her green handbag or recognized the weapon, and 14 didn't see the weapon at all. Many such experiments have produced similar results.

Answer to Question 2.

Zoologist Oliver Pearson says in Scientific American that the shrew is a vexatious, scolding, four-legged animal, rarely tamed since long before Shakespeare. Also: "Probably not one person in 10,000 ever saw one, although they abound everywhere." They live in burrows; some weigh less than a penny. Most American shrews are nocturnal. Wonder if that includes both kinds? Some women become shrews when poker games cause husbands to be nocturnal.

Answer to Question 3.

News Letter says that if you dislike fish odor—well—the fish feels the same about you. The Canadian government put 52 odorous solutions in salmon streams. Only five frightened the fish away—human skin, bear paw, deer foot, dog paw and sea lion meat—all salmon enemies. So don't walk downstream fishing. Your smell may announce your coming.

How to Set a Table

Always space place mats, silverware and glasses—when you are setting a table—as symetrically as possible. Silverware should be placed so that the bottom of each piece is an equal distance from the table edge.

Bride-Elect To Be Feted At Parties

MISS Nancy Ann Trimble, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert K. Trimble, 5315 Waterman avenue, will be guest of honor at many parties preceding her wedding Feb. 26 to Nicholas George. Sunday Mrs. Clarke Rainey (Virginia McCutchen) will be hostess at a kitchen shower at the home of her mother, Mrs. Lex G. McCutchen, 7369 Pershing boulevard, University City. The future bridegroom's sister, Miss Sophia George, will give a luncheon Saturday, Jan. 29, to be held at the Gourmet room of the Park Plaza Hotel. The following day Mrs. Joseph Gordon Wilson Jr. (Gloria Taylor) will honor the bride-elect at a miscellaneous shower at the Gatesworth Hotel.

A personal shower has been planned for Saturday, Feb. 5, by Miss Barbara McKim. The next night Miss Helen Ann Fisher will give a dessert party at the home of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. Gordon Fisher, 70 York drive, Brentwood. A luncheon at Bellerive Country Club will be given Saturday, Feb. 12, by Mrs. Carl A. Wattenberg, 49 Kingsbury place. Contemporaries of Miss Trimble will be entertained Sunday, Feb. 20, at a breakfast and linen shower to be given by Mrs. Donald Rupert Camien (Sue Strain) at the home of her mother, Mrs. Herbert A. Strain, 2 Exmoor drive, Ladue.

The wedding ceremony is scheduled for 7:30 o'clock at Westminster Presbyterian Church. Mr. George is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Themistokles George, 5207 Tholozan avenue.

Ann Dorothy Thornton To Be Married Feb. 12

MISS ANN DOROTHY THORNTON will be married to David James O'Malley Saturday morning, Feb. 12. After the 11 o'clock ceremony to be performed by the Rev. Clarence Good at the Church of SS. John and James in Ferguson, the parents of the bride-to-be, Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Thornton, 213 Royal avenue, Ferguson, will give a breakfast for the immediate families and the wedding party at the Gatesworth Hotel where additional guests will gather later for an afternoon reception.

Miss Thornton has asked her sister, Miss Elinore Thornton, to serve as maid of honor. Miss Theresa Robyn and Miss Carol Stammer are to be bridesmaids. Mr. O'Malley, son of Thomas Patrick O'Malley, 464 Lee avenue, Webster Groves, and the late Mrs. O'Malley, will announce his ushers later.

Miss Barbara Grady will entertain friends of the bride-elect Sunday at a miscellaneous shower at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin J. Grady, 19 South Hartnett avenue, Ferguson. The spinster dinner is to be given at the Chase Hotel early in February by the maid of honor. The father of the prospective bridegroom, Mr. O'Malley, will be host at the rehearsal dinner, Feb. 11, at the Missouri Athletic Club.

Among the pre-wedding parties already held in honor of Miss Thornton was a lingerie shower given by Miss Robyn and a linen shower for which Miss Stammer was hostess.

Desert Vacations In Mid-Winter For St. Louisans

By MILDRED CHAMBERLAIN

PHOENIX, Ariz., Jan. 18.

MANY St. Louisans have found a winter retreat in this sunny desert land.

At Camelback Inn, exclusive resort 11 miles from Phoenix, Mr. and Mrs. George L. Prater of Deer Creek lane in Ladue, are vacationing. After exploring the desert country, Mr. and Mrs. Prater recently drove up winding Apache Trail to Canyon Lake. There they joined two other Camelback fishing enthusiasts, the Ward Greenes of New Jersey (Mr. Greene is editor-in-chief of King Features), to fish for bass and catfish.

Mr. and Mrs. John D. MacCarthy of St. Louis were joined at Camelback last weekend by their son, Ens. Peter MacCarthy, who flew in for a 72-hour leave.

The MacCarthys have made several shopping trips to the nearby little town of Scottsdale, "where horses have the right of way." Here dudes camouflage themselves in squaw dress and frontier pants.

There is a fast-growing artist colony in Scottsdale where one may see desert gem-cutters, silver-smiths at work, Indians weaving blankets, and artists in their studios.

At the Arizona Biltmore, Frank Lloyd Wright's resort monument of the desert, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Barnes of St. Louis were early season guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Keller are returning for their annual visit on Jan. 20. They have been vacationing at the Biltmore for more than 10 years. Mr. Keller is a golf enthusiast, and enjoys the 18-hole championship course.

Early next month, Mrs. William D. Orthwein II will arrive for her annual visit. She is building a winter home in the Biltmore Estates.

The San Marcos in Chandler has long been a favorite spot for the St. Louis winter colony. Among the guests now vacationing there are Mr. and Mrs. T. Hartley Pollock, John T. Tabor, a golf enthusiast; Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Hoffmeister; William Sodemann and Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Nester, all of St. Louis. At the Westward Ho in downtown Phoenix are Mr. and Mrs. N. M. Glick of St. Louis, who are here for a six-week stay.

New trick: Use buttermilk in place of the milk or water called for in the package directions when you are baking a white cake.

Skillet Pork Chops and Sauerkraut

Ingredients: Four 1-inch thick loin pork chops, one 14-ounce can sauerkraut, two tablespoons dark brown sugar, one-fourth cup cooking sherry, salt, pepper.

Method: Cut almost all of outside layer of fat away from chops. Heat a bit of the fat in a 10-inch skillet until melted; add chops and brown slowly on both sides—about 10 minutes; remove chops. Add undrained sauerkraut to skillet; sprinkle with brown sugar and sherry; mix well with two forks. Arrange browned chops in skillet so that they are at bottom of pan and sauerkraut is around them; sprinkle chops with salt and pepper. Cover and cook over low heat until chops are tender—about 30 minutes; test by making small slit through chop near bone with a small knife — meat should be white. Remove chops to serving platter; taste sauerkraut and if you wish it more highly flavored add one-half to one tablespoon brown sugar and one to two tablespoons sherry, mixing well. Arrange sauerkraut around chops and serve at once. Makes four servings.

Television Notes and Gossip

A FILM designed to picture just what would happen if an H-bomb fell on a big city will be shown on "Medic" on KSD-TV Feb. 14. Producer Frank LaTourette says he hopes the half-hour drama, called "Flash of Darkness," will help get an all-important civil defense message over to the public.

* * *

Radio-TV columnist Jack O'Brian says the $100,000 Bob Hope will get for his one-hour Motorama telecast on NBC-TV and KSD-TV tomorrow night will be his alone—shared only by Uncle Sam. Deducting time for commercials, that's about $2000 a minute.

* * *

The NBC research department says it's estimated that there were 33,500,000 television sets in the United States as of Jan. 1. The figure as of Dec. 1, 1954, was 32,996,000, which was a gain of more than 6,000,000 over the Dec. 1, 1953 figure.

* * *

A tame deer will be seen on Bob Ingham's Sportsview program on KSD-TV at 5:30 this afternoon. The deer and its trainer, Miss Ellen Weed of Hartford, Conn., will be Ingham's guests.

* * *

"Howdy Doody" is owned by a banking firm which bought it several seasons ago for $1,000,000. After years of fat profits, the banking firm may sell it to NBC for a tidy fortune.

* * *

Danny Thomas will be master of ceremonies for the Feb. 5 White House Correspondents dinner. It will be a "prestige" job, meaning no fee.

* * *

Rome is reported negotiating for the "Amos 'n' Andy" television series. It's reported that Italian voices are being considered for the famous comedy characters.

* * *

Roy Rogers will appear as a guest on Bob Hope's television show Feb. 1. The two men are constant companions on the golf course, but this will be the first time they will have teamed up professionally.

* * *

Liberace's birthday gift to the director of his filmed TV show, Duke Goldstone, was a solid silver bow tie.

CHAPTER 19.

THE colonel was in full regalia, gold epaulettes and all. This morning he looked solid and impressive sitting behind his desk, like a real commander. Not that he wasn't a pretty good man on the whole, as colonels went, but there was something nervous about him that made other people nervous, a mighty bad trait in a man who had the last word in everything at Mesa Encantada.

"Sit down, Grein," he said, then he got out the cigars and they lit up. "First," the colonel went on, "I want to thank you from the bottom of my heart, and also on behalf of Mrs. Weybright, for your attitude in regard to that murderous Apache girl. There might have been a tragedy at our house except for you. Now, I believe, Mrs. Weybright is satisfied.

"The girl has been returned to the reservation. Every day she must report to the chief of the Apache police. She has no privileges. She can't even go into town. Maybe in the future we'll ease off these regulations; time will tell. Thank you, Grein. You were perfectly within your rights to insist on a prosecution. And I might add that Mrs. Weybright's attitude toward you has changed completely. She just didn't understand you, she says."

"Thanks, colonel," said Grein, looking down at his boots.

"Another thing," said the colonel. "We are going to see you off this evening as a mark of our gratitude and respect."

"That's not necessary, colonel," said Grein, quickly.

"Mrs. Weybright insists. In fact, she's even got a little souvenir for you, a little present. But don't let her find out I told you. She'd be furious."

Grein nodded and stared at his boots. There were plenty of prying eyes in this little town, and already it had certainly got around that Mrs. Weybright had come to his place and talked him out of his resolve — something nobody else had been able to do before, therefore a potent object of gossip. But maybe he was making too much of it. Why would anybody think a woman like Mrs. Weybright could have anything in common with a man like himself?

* * *

NOW the colonel got down to the real business of the interview. Agitated, he rose and paced back and forth beside the windows, occasionally throwing a glance out into the dusty, sun-baked street.

"Grein," he said, "I've got bad news for you. Mr. Busby and Mr. Jarvis have succeeded in putting us in a very serious position. Under no circumstances are you to lead this expedition."

Grein paled slightly. "Maybe I'd better bow out then, colonel."

"No," said the colonel, "you can't do that. What I mean is, you can't officially lead this expedition, if you understand me."

"Two men can't lead a thing like this, colonel. Authority can't be divided. There's too much at stake. You better let me bow out."

"Impossible. But I think I've got a compromise for you, that is if you will bear with me, Grein. I can tell you in confidence that this is a very serious thing for me. I have to succeed in this, or I'm afraid I'll be retired as a colonel, nothing else. They've passed me over many times already, Grein."

Grein flushed slightly, then set his jaw. "Colonel, if you don't mind my saying so, this is no time for politics and such things. Can't those fools understand? There's only one problem. We've got to run down and kill Toriano. Then we'll have peace on this reservation, maybe forever."

"Go soft on that killing stuff, Grein. Toriano is to be brought in, persuaded to come in. Orders from Washington. And I'm forced to send Lt. Atwell along with you to see that these orders are carried out. This outbreak is a big thing in the East. Headlines in all the Eastern papers."

Grein stood up. "I'm sorry, colonel. I guess I better resign and get myself a soft job in San Gorgonio or San Francisco and live easy. This is getting too much for me."

"Grein, Grein," the colonel pleaded. "Listen to me. I've already talked to Atwell. As soon as you get beyond the post you are in command. Nothing will be said about it. But that's the fact. Atwell's one of the best men on this post, one of the toughest. Whatever you can stand, he can stand. He's an ex-blacksmith, came up through the ranks. He's willing to co-operate 100 per cent, even to the extent of being cashiered later for ignoring specific instructions from Washington . . . this thing is bigger than any of us, Grein. The whole administration has got its eyes on us."

"Are they all fools back there, like Busby?"

"Some are, some aren't. Like every place, Grein."

There was a long silence, then Grein said: "That's a true remark, colonel, and relieves my mind a little. The fools and jackasses always make more noise than other people and a man is inclined to exaggerate their numbers."

"You'll go?"

"I guess I have to, colonel. I don't like it a little bit. But what can I do? I want to see this through. If Atwell's what you say, maybe things will work out."

ATWELL did not take to Grein, nor Grein to Atwell. Both recognized the fact, and both were smart enough to realize that their liking or disliking each other was beside the point.

Atwell was nearing 40 and had served in the First Ohio Volunteer Cavalry in the Civil War. As a teen-aged boy, he'd fought some of the toughest guerillas in the business. He had practically no education and had risen from the ranks solely through ability. He'd been kept down for years and even now was only a second lieutenant. He was almost as tall as Grein and much wider and heavier with tremendous forearms and shoulders. He had dark curly hair streaked with gray and a sullen, bull-like expression. He considered himself physically superior to all other men.

He saw at once that Grein did not agree with this estimate. They watched each other warily as they talked. There was no smiling, nor any attempts at friendliness; and yet at last Grein felt reasonably satisfied, and his worst fears began to die down.

As a rule, cavalry regulars were not up to taking the punishment you had to take when you went out on the trail of an Apache war band with the intention of sticking to it through thick and thin until the chase was over. Grein had a feeling that maybe this big, rough, surly fellow might not act as a drag on the expedition, break down at a crucial moment, go to pieces, as Grein had seen some pretty rough customers do. He might even be a help. Of course, there was no way to be certain till the test came, but Grein's general impression was favorable.

Finally they shook hands and Grein went back to report to the colonel.

"I think he'll do, colonel," said Grein.

The colonel heaved a sigh of relief and gave Grein another cigar.

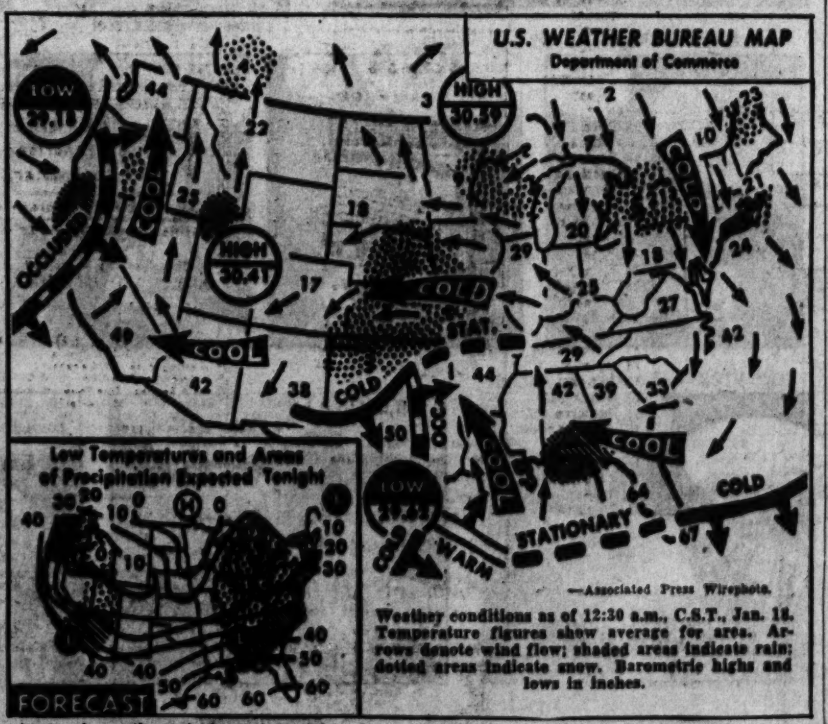
Three Inches of Snow Predicted



—Associated Press Wirephoto.

Weather conditions as of 12:30 a.m., C.S.T., Jan. 18. Temperature figures show average for area. Arrows denote wind flow; shaded areas indicate rain; dotted areas indicate snow. Barometric highs and lows in inches.

As much as three inches of snow is expected to fall here by tomorrow morning, Weatherman Harry F. Wahlgren said. The snow may begin to fall anytime today, Wahlgren said, noting that weather stations in outstate Missouri have been reporting snowfalls since early today.

Low temperature tomorrow morning will be between 15 and 20 degrees and the high tomorrow will be near 30, it was predicted.

Temperatures were below zero in the northern Midwest and the Rockies. A low of 34 below zero was reported at Craig, Colo., and at Grantsburg, Wis., in was 13 below.

Low temperature in the state yesterday was 24 at Kirksville and the high was 54 at Mauldin.

A belt of rain and some snow extended today from central Texas to western North Dakota and fairly heavy rains were reported along the northern Pacific coast.

The highest temperature recorded here on this date was 72 in 1880 and the lowest was 13 below zero in 1930.

Uncle Ray's Column

IF we can stand the heat of Death Valley, Calif., it is likely that we shall be able to survive a visit to any other place on earth—that is, to any place heated by the sun. A record in Libya is two degrees higher than the record of Death Valley, but that difference is small.

The earth has, of course, many higher temperatures than those which are recorded "in the shade" by weather bureaus. Outside the shade, the temperature goes higher, and what about a bonfire?

A bonfire is hot, but a furnace fire produced by the burning of coal or oil is far hotter.

ELECTRIC FURNACES give us the highest temperatures, of a controlled nature, known on earth. Sometimes an electric furnace provides heat of about 7000 degrees above zero Fahrenheit. The inside of an atomic explosion may be hotter than that, but the heat of such an explosion is hardly under control.

During the present century astronomers have done clever work in measuring temperatures of heavenly bodies. They give, for example, a close estimate of the hotness of the moon's surface while the moon is in sunshine. They also can tell fairly closely how cold the moon is after it is bathed in darkness.

* * *

THE TEMPERATURE of the sun at the surface seems to average about 10,000 degrees above zero. This means that it is hotter than the hottest electric furnace.

That is only part of the story. Scientists believe that the sun becomes hotter and hotter between the surface and the center. A leading astronomer has estimated that most of the sun's interior has a temperature of more than a million degrees.

CAESAR'S healthy army

Caesar said, "An army travels on its stomach," and all Roman soldiers were to be given a regular ration of milk and other milk products. Military historians call the Roman army the healthiest in the world, up to the 20th century.
